All's Well that Ends Well

ACT FIRST

Scene One

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter young Bertram, Count of Rousillon, his Mother [the Countess], and Helena, [and] Lord Lafeu, all in black.

Count. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ber. And I, in going, madam, weep o'er my father's death anew; but I must attend his 4 majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the king a husband, madam; you, sir, a father. He that so generally 8 is at all times good must of necessity hold his virtue to you, whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted rather than lack it where there is such abundance. 12

Count. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam, under whose practices he hath per- 16 secuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentlewoman had a fa- 20

ther,—O, that 'had!' how sad a passage 'tis!—whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for 24 lack of work. Would, for the king's sake, he were living! I think it would be the death of the king's disease.

Laf. How called you the man you speak of, 28 madam?

Count. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.

32

Laf. He was excellent indeed, madam: the king very lately spoke of him admiringly and mourningly. He was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against 36 mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord, the king languishes of?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Count. His sole child, my lord; and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good that her education promises: her dispositions she inherits, which makes fair gifts 48 fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities, there commendations go with pity; they are virtues and traitors too: in her

they are the better for their simpleness; she de- 52
rives her honesty and achieves her goodness.

Laf. Your commendations, madam, get from her tears.

Count. 'Tis the best brine a maiden can sea- 56 son her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek. No more of this, Helena; go to, no 60 more, lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, than to have—

Hel. I do affect a sorrow indeed, but I have it too. 64

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Count. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal. 68

Ber. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How understand we that?

Count. Be thou blest, Bertram; and succeed thy father

In manners, as in shape! thy blood and virtue 72
Contend for empire in thee, and thy goodness
Share with thy birthright! Love all, trust a few,
Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy
Rather in power than use, and keep thy friend 76
Under thy own life's key: be check'd for silence,
But never tax'd for speech. What heaven more will
That thee may furnish, and my prayers pluck down, Fall on thy head! [To Lafeu.] Farewell, my lord; 80

'Tis an unseason'd courtier; good my lord, Advise him.

Laf. He cannot want the best
That shall attend his love.

Count. Heaven bless him! Farewell, Bertram. 84

[Exit.]

Ber. [To Helena.] The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts be servants to you!
Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress,
and make much of her. 88

Laf. Farewell, pretty lady: you must hold the credit of your father.

[Exeunt Bertram and Lafeu.]

Hel. O, were that all! I think not on my father,
And these great tears grace his remembrance more 92
Than those I shed for him. What was he like?
I have forgot him: my imagination
Carries no favour in 't but Bertram's.
I am undone: there is no living, none, 96
If Bertram be away. 'Twere all one
That I should love a bright particular star
And think to wed it, he is so above me:
In his bright radiance and collateral light 100
Must I be comforted, not in his sphere.
Th' ambition in my love thus plagues itself:
The hind that would be mated by the lion
Must die for love. 'Twàs pretty, though a plague, 104
To see him every hour; to sit and draw
His arched brows, his hawking eye, his curls,
In our heart's table; heart too capable

Of every line and trick of his sweet favour: 108
But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancy
Must sanctify his relics. Who comes here?

Enter Parolles.

One that goes with him: I love him for his sake;
And yet I know him a notorious liar, 112
Think him a great way fool, solely a coward;
Yet these fix'd evils sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when virtue's steely bones
Looks bleak i' th' cold wind: withal, full oft we see 116
Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Par. Save you, fair queen!

Hel. And you, monarch!

Par. No. 120

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginity?

Hel. Ay. You have some stain of soldier in you; let me ask you a question. Man is enemy 124 to virginity; how may we barricado it against him?

Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he assails; and our virginity, though 128 valiant in the defence, yet is weak. Unfold to us some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none: man, setting down before you, will undermine you and blow you up. 132

Hel. Bless our poor virginity from under-miners and blowers up! Is there no military policy, how virgins might blow up men?

108 trick: peculiarity 110 sanctify his relics: worship his memory

114 sit . . . him: become him so well

120, 121 Cf. n. 123 stain: trace
131 setting down: setting down his batteries

Par. Virginity being blown down, man will 136 quicklier be blown up: marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach yourselves made, you lose your city. It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature to preserve virginity. Loss 140 of virginity is rational increase, and there was never virgin got till virginity was first lost.
That you were made of is metal to make virgins.
Virginity, by being once lost, may be ten times 144 found: by being ever kept, it is ever lost. 'Tis too cold a companion: away with 't!

Hel. I will stand for 't a little, though therefore I die a virgin. 148

Par. There's little can be said in 't; 'tis against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity is to accuse your mothers, which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs 152 himself is a virgin: virginity murders itself, and should be buried in highways, out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offendress against nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a cheese, 156 consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies with feeding his own stomach. Besides, virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. Keep it 160 not; you cannot choose but lose by 't! Out with 't! within the year it will make itself two, which is a goodly increase, and the principal itself not much the worse. Away with 't! 164

Hel. How might one do, sir, to lose it to her own liking?

158 his; cf. n.

161 Out with 't: put it to use

Par. Let me see: marry, ill, to like him that ne'er it likes. 'Tis a commodity will lose 168 the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth: off with 't, while 'tis vendible; answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion; richly suited, but 172 unsuitable: just like the brooch and the tooth-pick, which wear not now. Your date is better in your pie and your porridge than in your cheek:
 and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one 176 of our French withered pears; it looks ill, it eats drily; marry, 'tis a withered pear; it was formerly better; marry, yet 'tis a withered pear.
 Will you anything with it? 180

Hel. Not my virginity yet.

There shall your master have a thousand loves,
 A mother, and a mistress, and a friend,
 A phoenix, captain, and an enemy, 184
 A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign,
 A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear,
 His humble ambition, proud humility,
 His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet, 188
 His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world
 Of pretty, fond, adoptious christendoms,
 That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he—
 I know not what he shall. God send him well! 192
 The court's a learning-place, and he is one—

Par. What one, i' faith?

Hel. That I wish well. 'Tis pity—

Par. What's pity? 196

190 adoptious christendoms: nicknames

191 blinking: blind

gossips: is sponsor for

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in 't,
Which might be felt; that we, the poorer born,
Whose baser stars do shut us up in wishes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends, 200
And show what we alone must think, which never Returns us thanks.

Page. Monsieur Parolles, my lord calls for
you. [Exit.] 204

Par. Little Helen, farewell: if I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star. 208

Par. Under Mars, I.

Hel. I especially think, under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars?

Hel. The wars hath so kept you under that 212
you must needs be born under Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde, I think rather.

Par. Why think you so? 216

Hel. You go so much backward when you fight.

Par. That's for advantage.

Hel. So is running away, when fear proposes 220
the safety: but the composition that your valour and fear makes in you is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well.

Par. I am so full of businesses I cannot 224 naturalize thee, so thou wilt be capable of a courtier's counsel, and understand what advice 228 shall thrust upon thee; else thou diest in thine unthankfulness, and thine ignorance makes thee away: farewell. When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast none, remember thy 232 friends. Get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee: so, farewell. [Exit.]

Hel. Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky 236
Gives us free scope; only doth backward pull
Our slow designs when we ourselves are dull.
What power is it which mounts my love so high,
That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye? 240
The mightiest space in fortune nature brings
To join like likes, and kiss like native things.
Impossible be strange attempts to those
That weigh their pains in sense, and do suppose 244
What hath been cannot be: who ever strove
To show her merit, that did miss her love?
The king's disease—my project may deceive me,
But my intents are fix'd and will not leave me. 248

Scene Two

[Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.]

Flourish [of] Cornets. Enter the King of France, with letters, and divers Attendants.

King. The Florentines and Senoys are by th' ears;
Have fought with equal fortune, and continue
A braving war.

1. Lord. So 'tis reported, sir.

King. Nay, 'tis most credible: we here receive it 4
A certainty, vouch'd from our cousin Austria,
With caution that the Florentine will move us
For speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend
Prejudicates the business, and would seem 8
To have us make denial.

1. Lord. His love and wisdom,
Approv'd so to your majesty, may plead
For amplest credence.

King. He hath arm'd our answer,
And Florence is denied before he comes: 12
Yet, for our gentlemen that mean to see
The Tuscan service, freely have they leave
To stand on either part.

2. Lord. It well may serve
A nursery to our gentry, who are sick 16
For breathing and exploit.

King. What's he comes here?

Enter Bertram, Lafeu, and Parolles.

1. Lord. It is the Count Rousillon, my good lord,
Young Bertram.

King. Youth, thou bear'st thy father's face.
Frank nature, rather curious than in haste, 20
Hath well compos'd thee. Thy father's moral parts Mayst thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your majesty's.

King. I would I had that corporal soundness now, 24
As when thy father and myself in friendship
First tried our soldiership! He did look far Into the service of the time, and was Discipled of the bravest: he lasted long; 28
But on us both did haggish age steal on,
And wore us out of act. It much repairs me
To talk of your good father. In his youth
He had the wit which I can well observe 32
To-day in our young lords; but they may jest
Till their own scorn return to them unnoted
Ere they can hide their levity in honour.
So like a courtier, contempt nor bitterness 36
Were in his pride or sharpness; if they were,
His equal had awak'd them; and his honour,
Clock to itself, knew the true minute when Exception bid him speak, and at this time 40
His tongue obey'd his hand: who were below him
He us'd as creatures of another place,
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,

Making them proud of his humility 44

In their poor praise he humbled. Such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times,
Which, follow'd well, would demonstrate them now
But goes backward.

Ber. His good remembrance, sir, 48
Lies richer in your thoughts than on his tomb;
So in approof lives not his epitaph
As in your royal speech.

King. Would I were with him! He would always say,— 52

Methinks I hear him now: his plausible words
He scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them,
To grow there and to bear,—'Let me not live,'—
This his good melancholy oft began, 56

On the catastrophe and heel of pastime,
When it was out,—'Let me not live,' quoth he,
'After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses 60

All but new things disdain; whose judgments are Mere fathers of their garments; whose constancies
Expire before their fashions.' This he wish'd:
I, after him, do after him wish too, 64

Since I nor wax nor honey can bring home,
I quickly were dissolved from my hive,
To give some labourers room.

2. Lord. You're loved, sir;
They that least lend it you shall lack you first. 68

King. I fill a place, I know 't. How long is 't, count,
Since the physician at your father's died?

King. If he were living, I would try him yet: 72

Lend me an arm: the rest have worn me out

With several applications: nature and sickness

Debate it at their leisure. Welcome, count;

My son's no dearer.

Ber. Thank your majesty. 76

Exit [King, attended by all the others]. Flourish.

Scene Three

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter Countess, Steward, and Clown.

Count. I will now hear: what say you of this gentlewoman?

Stew. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the 4 calendar of my past endeavours; for then we wound our modesty and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them. 8

Count. What does this knave here? Get you gone, sirrah: the complaints I have heard of you I do not all believe: 'tis my slowness that I do not; for I know you lack not folly to commit 12 them, and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours.

Clo. 'Tis not unknown to you, madam, I am a poor fellow. 16

Count. Well, sir.

74 several applications: various remedies

75 Debate it: contend

3, 4 even your content: act in accord with your desires

Clo. No, madam, 'tis not so well that I am poor, though many of the rich are damned. But, if I may have your ladyship's good will to go to the 20 world, Isbel the woman and I will do as we may.

Count. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

Clo. I do beg your good will in this case.

Count. In what case? 24

Clo. In Isbel's case and mine own. Service is no heritage; and I think I shall never have the blessing of God till I have issue o' my body, for they say barnes are blessings. 28

Count. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry.

Clo. My poor body, madam, requires it: I am driven on by the flesh; and he must needs 32 go that the devil drives.

Count. Is this all your worship's reason?

Clo. Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are. 36

Count. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been, madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are; and, indeed, I do marry that I may repent. 40

Count. Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness.

Clo. I am out o' friends, madam; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake. 44

Count. Such friends are thine enemies, knave.

Clo. Y'are shallow, madam, in great friends; for the knaves come to do that for me which I am aweary of. He that ears my land spares my 48 team, and gives me leave to in the crop: if I be is my friend. If men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; 56 for young Charbon the puritan, and old Poysam

 the papist, howsome'er their hearts are severed in religion, their heads are both one; they may joul horns together like any deer i' the herd. 60

Count. Wilt thou ever be a foul-mouthed and calumnious knave?

Clo. A prophet I, madam; and I speak the truth the next way: 64

'For I the ballad will repeat,
 Which men full true shall find:
 Your marriage comes by destiny,
 Your cuckoo sings by kind.' 68

Count. Get, you gone, sir: I'll talk with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, madam, that he bid
 Helen come to you: of her I am to speak. 72

Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman I would speak with her; Helen, I mean.

Clo. 'Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,
 Why the Grecians sacked Troy? 76

 And gave this sentence then;
 Among nine bad if one be good,
 Among nine bad if one be good,
 There's yet one good in ten.' 84

Count. What! one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

Clo. One good woman in ten, madam; which is a purifying o' the song. Would God would 88 serve the world so all the year! we'd find no fault with the tithe-woman if I were the parson. One in ten, quoth a'! An we might have a good woman born but o'er every blazing star, or at an 92 earthquake, 'twould mend the lottery well: a man may draw his heart out ere a' pluck one.

Count. You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you! 96

Clo. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done! Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a 100 big heart. I am going, forsooth: the business is for Helen to come hither. Exit.

Count. Well, now.

Stew. I know, madam, you love your gentle- 104 woman entirely.

Count. Faith, I do: her father bequeathed her to me; and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much 108 love as she finds: there is more owing her than

92 o'er: during the appearance of blazing star: comet
 98-101 Though . . . heart; cf. n.
 101 big: proud business: thing to be done
 108 make title: prove her right is paid, and more shall be paid her than she'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her 112 than I think she wished me: alone she was, and did communicate to herself her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for her, they touched not any stranger sense. Her matter was, 116
she loved your son: Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; Love no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; 120 [Dian no] queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight surprised, without rescue in the first assault or ransom afterward. This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow that e'er I 124 heard virgin exclaim in; which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withal, sithence in the loss that may happen it concerns you something to know it. 128

Count. You have discharged this honestly:
keep it to yourself. Many likelihoods informed me of this before, which hung so tottering in the balance that I could neither believe nor mis- 132 doubt. Pray you, leave me: stall this in your bosom; and I thank you for your honest care. I will speak with you further anon. Exit Steward.

Enter Helen.

Even so it was with me when I was young: 136
If ever we are nature's, these are ours; this thorn

112 late: recently

116 touched . . . sense: were not overheard

Her matter: the sub- stance of her speech

122 knight: votaress surprised: to be surprised

123 delivered: spoke

126 sithence: since

127 loss: misfortune

132 misdoubt: disbelieve

133 stall this: keep this (knowledge)

137 these: these (feelings)

Doth to our rose of youth rightly belong;

Our blood to us, this to our blood is born:

It is the show and seal of nature's truth, 140

Where love's strong passion is impress'd in youth:

By our remembrances of days foregone,

Such were our faults, or then we thought them none.

Her eye is sick on 't: I observe her now. 144

Hel. What is your pleasure, madam?

Count. You know, Helen,

I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable mistress.

Count. Nay, a mother:

Why not a mother? When I said, 'a mother,' 148

Methought you saw a serpent: what's in 'mother'

That you start at it? I say, I am your mother;

And put you in the catalogue of those

That were enwombed mine: 'tis often seen 152

Adoption strives with nature, and choice breeds

A native slip to us from foreign seeds;

You ne'er oppress'd me with a mother's groan,

Yet I express to you a mother's care. 156

God's mercy, maiden! does it curd thy blood

To say I am thy mother? What's the matter,

That this distemper'd messenger of wet,

The many-colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye? 160

Why? that you are my daughter?

Hel. That I am not.

Count. I say, I am your mother.

Hel. Pardon, madam;

The Count Rousillon cannot be my brother:

I am from humble, he from honour'd name; 164

No note upon my parents, his all noble:

139 blood: disposition

144 on 't: because of it

159, 160 Cf. n.

140 show: evidence

154 native slip: grafted branch

165 note: mark of distinction

My master, my dear lord he is; and I
His servant live, and will his vassal die.
He must not be my brother.

Count. Nor I your mother? 168

Hel. You are my mother, madam: would you were,—
So that my lord your son were not my brother,—
Indeed my mother! or were you both our mothers,
I care no more for than I do for heaven, 172
So I were not his sister. Can't no other,
But, I your daughter, he must be my brother?

Count. Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter-in-law:

God shield you mean it not! daughter and mother 176
So strive upon your pulse. What, pale again?
My fear hath catch'd your fondness: now I see
The mystery of your loveliness, and find
Your salt tears' head: now to all sense 'tis gross: 180
You love my son: invention is asham'd,
Against the proclamation of thy passion,
To say thou dost not: therefore tell me true;
But tell me then, 'tis so: for, look, thy cheeks 184
Confess it, th' one to th' other; and thine eyes
See it so grossly shown in thy behaviours
That in their kind they speak it: only sin
And hellish obstinacy tie thy tongue, 188
That truth should be suspected. Speak, is 't so?
If it be so, you have wound a goodly clew;
If it be not, forswear 't: howe'er, I charge thee,
As heaven shall work in me for thine avail, 192

173 Can't no other: can it not be otherwise

177 strive . . . pulse: affect your pulse in turn

178 catch'd: discovered 180 head: source gross: palpable

181 invention: dissimulation 182 Against: in the face of

186 grossly: openly 187 in their kind: after their own manner

189 That . . . suspected: in order to cast doubt upon the truth

190 wound . . . clew: made a fine snarl 191 howe'er: in any event

192 If you wish Heaven to move me to help you

To tell me truly.

Hel. Good madam, pardon me!

Count. Do you love my son?

Hel. Your pardon, noble mistress!

Count. Love you my son?

Hel. Do not you love him, madam?

Count. Go not about; my love hath in 't a bond 196

Whereof the world takes note: come, come, disclose

The state of your affection, for your passions

Have to the full appeach'd.

Hel. Then, I confess,

Here on my knee, before high heaven and you 200

That before you, and next unto high heaven,

I love your son.

My friends were poor, but honest; so's my love:

Be not offended, for it hurts not him 204

That he is lov'd of me: I follow him not

By any token of presumptuous suit;

Nor would I have him till I do deserve him;

Yet never know how that desert should be. 208

I know I love in vain, strive against hope;

Yet, in this captious and intenable sieve

I still pour in the waters of my love,

And lack not to lose still. Thus, Indian-like, 212

Religious in mine error, I adore

The sun, that looks upon his worshipper,

But knows of him no more. My dearest madam,

Let not your hate encounter with my love 216

For loving where you do: but, if yourself,

Whose aged honour cites a virtuous youth,

Did ever in so true a flame of liking

Wish chastely and love dearly, that your Dian 220

196 Go not about: do not quibble

199 appeach'd: accused you

210 captious: deceptive intenable: incapable of retaining

212 lack . . . still: have an inexhaustible supply to pour forth

216 encounter with: oppose

218 cites: is proof of

Was both herself and Love, O! then, give pity
To her, whose state is such that cannot choose
But lend and give where she is sure to lose,
That seeks not to find that her search implies, 224
But, riddle-like, lives sweetly where she dies.

Count. Had you not lately an intent—speak truly—
To go to Paris?

Hel. Madam, I had.

Count. Wherefore? tell true.

Hel. I will tell truth; by grace itself I swear. 228

You know my father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading
And manifest experience had collected
For general sovereignty; and that he will'd me 232
In heedfull'st reservation to bestow them,
As notes whose faculties inclusive were
More than they were in note. Amongst the rest,
There is a remedy, approv'd, set down 236
To cure the desperate languishings whereof
The king is render'd lost.

Count. This was your motive
For Paris, was it? speak.

Hel. My lord your son made me to think of this; 240
Else Paris and the medicine and the king
Had from the conversation of my thoughts
Haply been absent then.

Count. But think you, Helen,
If you should tender your supposed aid, 244
He would receive it? He and his physicians
Are of a mind; he, that they cannot help him,

224 that: that which 225 riddle-like: paradoxically
232 general sovereignty: universal efficacy
233 reservation: safe-keeping
234 notes: prescriptions faculties: powers inclusive: all-embracing 235 in note: stated in writing
238 render'd lost: reported to be sick unto death
242 conversation: intercourse 243 Haply: perhaps

They, that they cannot help. How shall they credit
 A poor unlearned virgin, when the schools, 248
 Embowell'd of their doctrine, have left off
 The danger to itself?

Hel. There's something in 't,
 More than my father's skill, which was the great'st
 Of his profession, that his good receipt 252
 Shall for my legacy be sanctified
 By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would your honour
 But give me leave to try success, I'd venture
 The well-lost life of mine on his Grace's cure, 256
 By such a day, an hour.

Count. Dost thou believe 't?

Hel. Ay, madam, knowingly.

Count. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave and love,
 Means, and attendants, and my loving greetings 260
 To those of mine in court. I'll stay at home
 And pray God's blessing into thy attempt.
 Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this,
 What I can help thee to thou shalt not miss. 264

Exeunt.

249 Embowell'd . . . doctrine: exhausted of their learning

ACT SECOND

Scene One

[Paris. A Room in the King's Palace]

Enter the King, [attended,] with divers young Lords taking leave for the Florentine war; Count Roussillon and Parolles. Flourish [of] cornets.

King. Farewell, young lords: these warlike principles

Do not throw from you: and you, my lords, farewell:
Share the advice betwixt you; if both gain all,
The gift doth stretch itself as 'tis receiv'd, 4
And is enough for both.

1. Lord. 'Tis our hope, sir,

After well enter'd soldiers, to return
And find your Grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart 3
Will not confess he owes the malady
That doth my life besiege. Farewell, young lords;
Whether I live or die, be you the sons
Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy— 12
Those bated that inherit but the fall
Of the last monarchy—see that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it; when
The bravest questant shrinks, find what you seek 16
That fame may cry you loud: I say, farewell.

2. Lord. Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them:
They say our French lack language to deny 20

6 After . . . soldiers: after we are well embarked on our military careers

12-14 let . . . monarchy; cf. n.

9 owes: owns

17 cry you loud: proclaim you loudly

16 questant: seeker

If they demand: beware of being captives,
Before you serve.

Both Lords. Our hearts receive your warnings.

King. Farewell. [To another Lord.] Come hither to me. [They converse.]

1. Lord. [To Bertram.] O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us! 24

Par. 'Tis not his fault, the spark.

2. Lord. O, 'tis brave wars!

Par. Most admirable: I have seen those wars.

Ber. I am commanded here, and kept a coil with 'Too young,' and 'the next year,' and 'tis too early.' 28

Par. An thy mind stand to 't, boy, steal away bravely.

Ber. I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock, Creaking my shoes on the plain masonry, Till honour be bought up and no sword worn 32 But one to dance with! By heaven! I'll steal away.

1. Lord. There's honour in the theft.

Par. Commit it, count.

2. Lord. I am your accessory; and so farewell.

Ber. I grow to you, and our parting is a tor- 36 tured body.

1. Lord. Farewell, captain.

2. Lord. Sweet Monsieur Parolles!

Par. Noble heroes, my sword and yours are 40 kin. Good sparks and lustrous, a word, good metals: you shall find in the regiment of the Spinii, one Captain Spurio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek: it 44 was this very sword entrenched it: say to him, I live, and observe his reports for me.

27 kept a coil: pestered

30 forehorse . . . smock: usher to a lady

32 bought up: entirely appropriated by others

33 But . . . with; cf. n.

35 accessory: accessory

36, 37 our . . . body; cf. n.

2. Lord. We shall, noble captain.

Par. Mars dote on you for his novices! 48

[Exeunt Lords.]

What will ye do?

Ber. Stay the king.

Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords; you have restrained yourself within 52 the list of too cold an adieu: be more expressive to them; for they wear themselves in the cap of the time, there do muster true gait, eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most re- 56 ceived star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed. After them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Ber. And I will do so. 60

Par. Worthy fellows; and like to prove most sinewy swordmen.

Exeunt [Bertram and Parolles].

Enter Lafeu.

Laf. [Kneeling.] Pardon, my lord, for me and for my tidings.

King. I'll see thee to stand up. 64

Laf. Then here's a man stands that has brought his pardon.

I would you had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me mercy, And that at my bidding you could so stand up.

King. I would I had, so I had broke thy pate, 68 And ask'd thee mercy for 't.

Laf. Good faith, across: but, my good lord, 'tis thus; Will you be cur'd of your infirmity?

48 novices: devotees

49 ye: i.e. Bertram

50 Stay the king: await the king's pleasure

51 spacious ceremony: elaborate courtesy 53 list: boundary

54, 55 wear . . . time: are an ornament to the time

55 muster . . . gait: exhibit good manners

56 received: fashionable

64 I'll . . . to: I wish to see you

King. No.

72

Laf. O! will you eat no grapes, my royal fox?
 Yes, but you will my noble grapes an if My royal fox could reach them. I have seen a medicine
 That's able to breathe life into a stone, 76
 Quicken a rock, and make you dance canary
 With spritely fire and motion; whose simple touch
 Is powerful to araise King Pepin, nay,
 To give great Charlemain a pen in's hand 80
 And write to her a love-line.

King.

What 'her' is this?

Laf. Why, Doctor She. My lord, there's one arriv'd,
 If you will see her: now, by my faith and honour,
 If seriously I may convey my thoughts 84
 In this my light deliverance, I have spoke
 With one, that in her sex, her years, profession,
 Wisdom, and constancy, hath amaz'd me more
 Than I dare blame my weakness. Will you see her 88
 (For that is her demand) and know her business?
 That done, laugh well at me.

King.

Now, good Lafeu,

Bring in the admiration, that we with thee
 May spend our wonder too, or take off thine 92
 By wondering how thou took'st it.

Laf.

Nay, I'll fit you,

And not be all day neither.

[He retires to the door.]

King. Thus he his special nothing ever prologues.

Laf. [to Helena, without.] Nay, come your ways.

Enter Helen.

King.

This haste hath wings indeed. 96

77 canary: a lively dunce

85 deliverance: speech

87, 88 more . . . weakness; cf. n.

91 admiration: marvel

92 take off: dispel

93 took'st: didst conceive fit: satisfy

95 Thus he always introduces the particular nonsense he has in hand

Laf. Nay, come your ways;
 This is his majesty, say your mind to him:
 A traitor you do look like, but such traitors
 His majesty seldom fears: I am Cressid's uncle, 100
 That dare leave two together. Fare you well.

Exit.

King. Now, fair one, does your business follow us?

Hel. Ay, my good lord.
 Gerard de Narbon was my father; 104
 In what he did profess well found.

King. I knew him.

Hel. The rather will I spare my praises towards him;
 Knowing him is enough. On's bed of death
 Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one, 108
 Which, as the dearest issue of his practice,
 And of his old experience the only darling,
 He bade me store up as a triple eye,
 Safer than mine own two, more dear. I have so; 112
 And, hearing your high majesty is touch'd
 With that malignant cause wherein the honour
 Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power,
 I come to tender it and my appliance, 116
 With all bound humbleness.

King. We thank you, maiden,
 But may not be so credulous of cure,
 When our most learned doctors leave us, and
 The congregated college have concluded 120
 That labouring art can never ransom nature
 From her inaidable estate; I say we must not
 So stain our judgment or corrupt our hope,

102 follow: concern

111 triple: third

114, 115 wherein . . . power; cf. n.

116 appliance: application (of the medicine)

117 bound: dutiful

120 congregated college: entire college (of physicians) in consultation

122 inaidable: incurable

105 well found: learned

114 cause: disease

To prostitute our past-cure malady 124
 To empirics, or to dissever so
 Our great self and our credit, to esteem
 A senseless help when help past sense we deem.

Hel. My duty then, shall pay me for my pains: 128
 I will no more enforce mine office on you;
 Humbly entreating from your royal thoughts
 A modest one to bear me back again.

King. I cannot give thee less, to be call'd grateful. 132
 Thou thought'st to help me, and such thanks I give
 As one near death to those that wish him live;
 But what at full I know, thou know'st no part,
 I knowing all my peril, thou no art. 136

Hel. What I can do can do no hurt to try,
 Since you set up your rest 'gainst remedy.
 He that of greatest works is finisher
 Oft does them by the weakest minister: 140
 So holy writ in babes hath judgment shown,
 When judges have been babes; great floods have flown
 From simple sources, and great seas have dried
 When miracles have by the greatest been denied. 144
 Oft expectation fails, and most oft there
 Where most it promises; and oft it hits
 Where hope is coldest and despair most sits.

King. I must not hear thee: fare thee well, kind maid. 148

Thy pains, not us'd, must by thyself be paid:
 Proffers not took reap thanks for their reward.

Hel. Inspired merit so by breath is barr'd.
 It is not so with Him that all things knows, 152
 As 'tis with us that square our guess by shows;

125 empirics: charlatans

127 past sense: beyond reasonable expectation

132 to be call'd: if I am to be called

138 Since you are so sure there is no remedy

151 breath: words

153 square . . . shows: test our impressions by outward appearances

But most it is presumption in us when
 The help of heaven we count the act of men.
 Dear sir, to my endeavours give consent; 156
 Of heaven, not me, make an experiment.
 I am not an imposture that proclaim
 Myself against the level of mine aim;
 But know I think, and think I know most sure 160
 My art is not past power nor you past cure.

King. Art thou so confident? Within what space
 Hop'st thou my cure?

Hel. The greatest grace lending grace,
 Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring 164
 Their fiery torcher his diurnal ring,
 Ere twice in murk and occidental damp
 Moist Hesperus hath quench'd her sleepy lamp,
 Or four and twenty times the pilot's glass 168
 Hath told the thievish minutes how they pass,
 What is infirm from your sound parts shall fly,
 Health shall live free and sickness freely die.

King. Upon thy certainty and confidence 172
 What dar'st thou venture?

Hel. Tax of impudence,
 A strumpet's boldness, a divulged shame,
 Traduc'd by odious ballads: my maiden's name
 Sear'd otherwise; nay worse—if worse—extended 176
 With vilest torture let my life be ended.

King. Methinks in thee some blessed spirit doth speak
 His powerful sound within an organ weak;
 And what impossibility would slay 180
 In common sense, sense saves another way.
 Thy life is dear; for all that life can rate

159 against . . . aim: equal to my task

165 diurnal ring: daily round

168 glass: hour-glass

176 nay . . . worse; cf. n.

169 told: counted

167 her; cf. n.

173 Tax: accusation

182 rate: consider

Worth name of life, in thee hath estimate;
 Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, all 184
 That happiness and prime can happy call:
 Thou this to hazard needs must intimate
 Skill infinite or monstrous desperate.
 Sweet practiser, thy physic I will try, 188
 That ministers thine own death if I die.

Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property
 Of what I spoke, unpitied let me die,
 And well deserv'd. Not helping, death's my fee; 192
 But, if I help, what do you promise me?

King. Make thy demand.

Hel. But will you make it even?

King. Ay, by my sceptre, and my hopes of heaven.

Hel. Then shalt thou give me with thy kingly hand 196

What husband in thy power I will command:
 Exempted be from me the arrogance
 To choose from forth the royal blood of France,
 My low and humble name to propagate 200
 With any branch or image of thy state;
 But such a one, thy vassal, whom I know
 Is free for me to ask, thee to bestow.

King. Here is my hand; the premises observ'd, 204
 Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd:
 So make the choice of thy own time, for I,
 Thy resolv'd patient, on thee still rely.
 More should I question thee, and more I must, 208
 (Though more to know could not be more to trust)
 From whence thou cam'st, how tended on; but rest

183 in . . . estimate: has great value for you 185 prime: youth

186 Thou . . . hazard: your risking this intimate: indicate

188 practiser: practitioner

190 If I delay beyond the appointed time, or come short in performance

194 make it even: fulfill it

198 Exempted be: far be

210 tended on: attended

Unquestion'd welcome and undoubted blest.

Give me some help here, ho! If thou proceed 212

As high as word, my deed shall match thy deed.

Flourish. Exit [with Attendants; Helena follows.]

Scene Two

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. Come on, sir; I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clo. I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught. I know my business is but to the 4 court.

Count. To the court! why what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt? 'But to the court!' 8

Clo. Truly, madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court. He that cannot make a leg, put off's cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, 12 lip, nor cap; and indeed such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court: but for me, I have an answer will serve all men.

Count. Marry, that's a bountiful answer 16 that fits all questions.

Clo. It is like a barber's chair that fits all buttocks; the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the brawn-buttock, or any buttock. 20

212, 213 If . . . word: if you perform your promises

1, 2 put . . . height: make thorough trial

6, 7 make you special: do you consider extraordinary

10 put it off: make his way

19 pin-buttock: thin buttock quatch-buttock: flat buttock

20 brawn-buttock: brawny buttock

11 leg: bow

Count. Will your answer serve fit to all questions?

Clo. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney, as your French crown for your taffeta 24 punk, as Tib's rush for Tom's forefinger, as a pancake for Shrove-Tuesday, a morris for May-day, as the nail to his hole, the cuckold to his horn, as a scolding quean to a wrangling knave, 28 as the nun's lip to the friar's mouth, nay, as the pudding to his skin.

Count. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions? 32

Clo. From below your duke to beneath your constable, it will fit any question.

Count. It must be an answer of most monstrous size that must fit all demands. 36

Clo. But a trifle neither, in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it. Here it is, and all that belongs to 't; ask me if I am a courtier; it shall do you no harm to learn. 40

Count. To be young again, if we could! I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer. I pray you, sir, are you a courtier? 44

Clo. O Lord, sir! there's a simple putting off. More, more, a hundred of them.

Count. Sir, I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you. 48

Clo. O Lord, sir! Thick, thick, spare not me.

Count. I think, sir, you can eat none of this homely meat. 52

24 crown: a coin

24, 25 taffeta punk: prostitute dressed in taffeta

25 Tib's . . . forefinger; cf. n.

26 morris: morris-dance

28 quean: woman

52 homely meat: humble food

Clo. O Lord, sir! Nay, put me to 't, I warrant you.

Count. You were lately whipped, sir, as I think. 56

Clo. O Lord, sir! Spare not me.

Count. Do you cry, 'O Lord, sir!' at your whipping, and 'Spare not me'? Indeed your 'O Lord, sir!' is very sequent to your whipping: 60 you would answer very well to a whipping, if you were but bound to 't.

Clo. I ne'er had worse luck in my life in my 'O Lord, sir!' I see things may serve long, but 64 not serve ever.

Count. I play the noble housewife with the time, To entertain 't so merrily with a fool.

Clo. O Lord, sir! why, there 't serves well again. 68

Count. An end, sir: to your business. Give Helen this,

And urge her to a present answer back:
Commend me to my kinsmen and my son.

This is not much. 72

Clo. Not much commendation to them?

Count. Not much employment for you: you understand me.

Clo. Most fruitfully: I am there before my legs.

Count. Haste you again. 76

Exeunt [severally].

Scene Three

[Paris. A Room in the King's Palace]

Enter Count, Lafeu, and Parolles.

Laf. They say miracles are past; and we have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar, things supernatural and causeless. Hence is it that we make trifles of terrors, ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear.

Par. Why, 'tis the rarest argument of wonder that hath shot out in our latter times. 8

Ber. And so 'tis.

Laf. To be relinquished of the artists,—

Par. So I say—both of Galen and Paracelsus.

Laf. Of all the learned and authentic fellows,— 12

Par. Right; so I say.

Laf. That gave him out incurable,—

Par. Why, there 'tis; so say I too.

Laf. Not to be helped,— 16

Par. Right; as 'twere, a man assured of a—

Laf. Uncertain life, and sure death.

Par. Just, you say well: so would I have said. 20

Laf. I may truly say it is a novelty to the world.

Par. It is, indeed: if you will have it in showing, you shall read it in What-do-you-call 24 there.

2 modern: trivial

4, 5 ensconcing . . . into: sheltering ourselves within

10 relinquished . . . artists: given up by all the scholars

12 authentic: authoritative physicians fellows: members (of the college of

19 Just: precisely

14 gave him out: pronounced him
23, 24 in showing: in black and white

Laf. A showing of a heavenly effect in an earthly actor.

Par. That's it I would have said; the very 28 same.

Laf. Why, your dolphin is not lustier: 'fore me, I speak in respect—

Par. Nay, 'tis strange, 'tis very strange, that 32 is the brief and the tedious of it; and he's of a most facinerious spirit that will not acknowledge it to be the—

Laf. Very hand of heaven—

Par. Ay, so I say.

Laf. In a most weak—

Par. And debile minister, great power, great transcendence: which should, indeed, give us a 40 further use to be made than alone the recovery of the king, as to be—

Laf. Generally thankful.

Enter King, Helen, and Attendants.

Par. I would have said it; you say well. Here comes the king.

Laf. Lustig, as the Dutchman says: I'll like a maid the better, whilst I have a tooth in my 48 head. Why, he's able to lead her a coranto.

Par. Mort du vinaigre! Is not this Helen?

Laf. 'Fore God, I think so.

King. Go, call before me all the lords in court. 52

[Exit an Attendant.]

Sit, my preserver, by thy patient's side:
And with this healthful hand, whose banish'd sense
Thou hast repeal'd, a second time receive

34 facinerious; cf. n.

49 coranto: a lively dance

54 sense: faculties

47 Lustig: brisk

50 Mort du vinaigre; cf. n.

55 repeal'd: called back

The confirmation of my promised gift, 56
Which but attends thy naming.

Enter three or four Lords.

Fair maid, send forth thine eye: this youthful parcel
Of noble bachelors stand at my bestowing,
O'er whom both sovereign power and father's voice 60
I have to use; thy frank election make;
Thou hast power to choose, and they none to forsake.

Hel. To each of you one fair and virtuous mistress
Fall, when Love please; marry, to each but one. 64

Laf. I'd give bay Curtal, and his furniture,
My mouth no more were broken than these boys'
And writ as little beard.

King. Peruse them well:
Not one of those but had a noble father. 68

She addresses her to a Lord.

Hel. Gentlemen,
Heaven hath through me restor'd the king to health.

All. We understand it, and thank heaven for you.

Hel. I am a simple maid, and therein wealthiest 72
That I protest I simply am a maid.
Please it your majesty, I have done already:
The blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me,
'We blush, that thou shouldst choose; but, be refus'd, 76
Let the white death sit on thy cheek for ever;
We'll ne'er come there again.'

King. Make choice, and see;
Who shuns thy love, shuns all his love in me.

Hel. Now, Dian, from thy altar do I fly, 80
And to imperial Love, that god most high,

57 attends: awaits

62 forsake: deny

65 bay . . . furniture: my bay horse and his harness

66 broken: lacking teeth

77 white death: deathly pallor

58 parcel: group

64 to . . . one; cf. n.

67 writ: laid claim to

Do my sighs stream. Sir, will you hear my suit?

1. Lord. And grant it.

Hel. Thanks, sir; all the rest is mute.

Laf. I had rather be in this choice than 84 throw ames-ace for my life.

Hel. The honour, sir, that flames in your fair eyes,
Before I speak, too threateningly replies:
Love make your fortunes twenty times above 88
Her that so wishes, and her humble love!

2. Lord. No better, if you please.

Hel. My wish receive,
Which great Love grant! and so I take my leave.

Laf. Do all they deny her? An they were 92 sons of mine, I'd have them whipp'd or I would send them to the Turk to make eunuchs of.

Hel. [To third Lord.] Be not afraid that I your hand should take;
I'll never do you wrong, for your own sake: 96
Blessing upon your vows; and in your bed
Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!

Laf. These boys are boys of ice, they'll none have her: sure, they are bastards to the Eng- 100 lish; the French ne'er got 'em.

Hel. You are too young, too happy, and too good,
To make yourself a son out of my blood.

4. Lord. Fair one, I think not so. 104

Laf. There's one grape yet. I am sure thy father drunk wine. But if thou be'st not an ass,
I am a youth of fourteen: I have known thee already. 108

Hel. [To Bertram.] I dare not say I take you; but I give

Me and my service, ever whilst I live,
Into your guiding power. This is the man.

King. Why then, young Bertram, take her; she's thy wife. 112

Ber. My wife, my liege! I shall beseech your highness

In such a business give me leave to use
The help of mine own eyes.

King. Know'st thou not, Bertram,
What she has done for me?

Ber. Yes, my good lord; 116
But never hope to know why I should marry her.

King. Thou know'st she has rais'd me from my sickly bed.

Ber. But follows it, my lord, to bring me down
Must answer for your raising? I know her well: 120
She had her breeding at my father's charge.
A poor physician's daughter my wife! Disdain
Rather corrupt me ever!

King. 'Tis only title thou disdain'st in her, the which 124

I can build up. Strange is it that our bloods,
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,
Would quite confound distinction, yet stands off
In differences so mighty. If she be 128
All that is virtuous, save what thou dislik'st,
A poor physician's daughter, thou dislik'st
Of virtue for the name; but do not so:
From lowest place when virtuous things proceed, 132
The place is dignified by the doer's deed:

122, 123 Disdain . . . ever: rather let your displeasure cast me down forever 124 title: want of title

126 Of: in respect of

127 confound distinction: defy differentiation stands off: diverge

130, 131 thou . . . name: you despise virtue because it lacks a high-sounding title

Where great additions swell's, and virtue none,
 It is a dropsied honour. Good alone
 Is good, without a name: vileness is so: 136
 The property by what it is should go,
 Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair;
 In these to nature she's immediate heir,
 And these breed honour: that is honour's scorn 140
 Which challenges itself as honour's born,
 And is not like the sire: honours thrive
 When rather from our acts we them derive
 Than our foregoers. The mere word's a slave, 144
 Debosh'd on every tomb, on every grave,
 A lying trophy, and as oft is dumb
 Where dust and damn'd oblivion is the tomb
 Of honour'd bones indeed. What should be said? 148
 If thou canst like this creature as a maid,
 I can create the rest: virtue and she
 Is her own dower; honour and wealth from me.

Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to do 't. 152

King. Thou wrong'st thyself if thou shouldst strive to choose.

Hel. That you are well restor'd, my lord, I'm glad:
 Let the rest go.

King. My honour's at the stake, which to defeat 156
 I must produce my power. Here, take her hand,
 Proud scornful boy, unworthy this good gift,
 That dost in vile misprision shackle up
 My love and her desert; that canst not dream 160

134 When great titles exalt us, yet we have no virtue

135 dropsied: swollen by disease

136 vileness is so: vileness is vileness, although it be not called so

137 property: quality

139 She is indebted to nature for these gifts

141 challenges: proclaims

144 foregoers: ancestors

145 Debosh'd: perverted

156 which to defeat: to prevent the loss of which

159 misprision; cf. n.

We, poisoning us in her defective scale,
 Shall weigh thee to the beam; that wilt not know,
 It is in us to plant thine honour where
 We please to have it grow. Check thy contempt: 164
 Obey our will, which travails in thy good:
 Believe not thy disdain, but presently
 Do thine own fortunes that obedient right
 Which both thy duty owes and our power claims; 168
 Or I will throw thee from my care for ever
 Into the staggers and the careless lapse
 Of youth and ignorance, both my revenge and hate
 Loosing upon thee, in the name of justice, 172
 Without all terms of pity. Speak; thine answer.

Ber. Pardon, my gracious lord; for I submit
 My fancy to your eyes. When I consider
 What great creation and what dole of honour 176
 Flies where you bid it, I find that she, which late
 Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now
 The praised of the king; who, so ennobled,
 Is, as 'twere, born so.

King. Take her by the hand, 180
 And tell her she is thine: to whom I promise
 A counterpoise, if not to thy estate
 A balance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand.

King. Good fortune and the favour of the king 184
 Smile upon this contract, whose ceremony
 Shall seem expedient on the now-born brief,
 And be perform'd to-night: the solemn feast
 Shall more attend upon the coming space, 188

161 poisoning us: adding our weight defective: light 163 in us: in our power 165 travails in: works toward 167 Serve your own interests by obedience
 170 staggers: bewilderment careless lapse: unheeded fall
 178 nobler: too noble 183 more replete: more than equal
 186 Shall seem to follow immediately upon this new-made contract

Expecting absent friends. As thou lov'st her,
Thy love's to me religious; else, does err.

Exeunt [King, Bertram, Helena, Lords, and Attendants.] Parolles and Lafeu stay behind, commenting of this wedding.

Laf. Do you hear, monsieur? a word with you.

Par. Your pleasure, sir? 192

Laf. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation! My lord! my master!

Laf. Ay; is it not a language I speak? 196

Par. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master!

Laf. Are you companion to the Count
Rousillon? 200

Par. To any count; to all counts; to what is man.

Laf. To what is count's man: count's master is of another style. 204

Par. You are too old, sir; let it satisfy you, you are too old.

Laf. I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man; to which title age cannot bring thee. 208

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did think thee, for two ordinaries, to be a pretty wise fellow: thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travel; it might pass; yet 212
the scarfs and the bannerets about thee did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of too great a burthen. I have now found thee; when I lose thee again, I care not; yet art 216

Par. Hadst thou not the privilege of antiquity upon thee,— 220

Laf. Do not plunge thyself too far in anger, lest thou hasten thy trial; which if—Lord have mercy on thee for a hen! So, my good window of lattice, fare thee well: thy casement I need 224 not open, for I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Par. My lord, you give me most egregious indignity. 228

Laf. Ay, with all my heart; and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I have not, my lord, deserved it.

Laf. Yes, good faith, every dram of it; and I 232 will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser—

Laf. Ev'n as soon as thou canst, for thou hast to pull at a smack o' the contrary. If ever 236 thou be'st bound in thy scarf and beaten, thou shalt find what it is to be proud of thy bondage. I have a desire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say in 240 the default, he is a man I know.

Par. My lord, you do me most insupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell-pains for thy sake, 244 and my poor doing eternal: for doing I am past; as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me leave.

Exit.

Par. Well, thou hast a son shall take this 248 disgrace off me; scurvy, old, filthy, scurvy lord!
Well, I must be patient; there is no fettering of authority. I'll beat him, by my life, if I can meet him with any convenience, an he were 252 double and double a lord. I'll have no more pity of his age than I would have of—I'll beat him, an if I could but meet him again!

[Re-]enter Lafeu.

Laf. Sirrah, your lord and master's married; 256 there's news for you: you have a new mistress.

Par. I most unfeignedly beseech your lordship to make some reservation of your wrongs:
he is my good lord: whom I serve above is my 260 master.

Laf. Who? God?

Par. Ay, sir.

Laf. The devil it is that's thy master. Why 264
dost thou garter up thy arms o' this fashion?
dost make hose of thy sleeves? do other servants so? Thou wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine honour, if I were but two 268 hours younger, I'd beat thee: methinks thou art a general offence, and every man should beat thee: I think thou wast created for men to breathe themselves upon thee. 272

Par. This is hard and undeserved measure, my lord.

Laf. Go to, sir; you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernel out of a pomegranate; you are 276 a vagabond and no true traveller: you are more saucy with lords and honourable personages than the commission of your birth and virtue gives you heraldry. You are not worth another 280 word, else I'd call you knave. I leave you. Exit.

Enter Count Rousillon.

Par. Good, very good; it is so then: good, very good, let it be concealed awhile.

Ber. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever! 284

Par. What's the matter, sweet heart?

Ber. Although before the solemn priest I have sworn, I will not bed her.

Par. What, what, sweet heart? 288

Ber. O my Parolles, they have married me! I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits The tread of a man's foot. To the wars! 292

Ber. There's letters from my mother: what the import is I know not yet.

Par. Ay, that would be known. To the wars, my boy! to the wars!

He wears his honour in a box, unseen, 296

That hugs his kicky-wicky here at home,

Spending his manly marrow in her arms,

Which should sustain the bound and high curvet

Of Mars's fiery steed. To other regions 300

France is a stable; we that dwell in 't jades;

Therefore, to the war!

Ber. It shall be so: I'll send her to my house,

Acquaint my mother with my hate to her, 304

And wherefore I am fled; write to the king

That which I durst not speak: his present gift

Where noble fellows strike. Wars is no strife 308
To the dark house and the detested wife.

Par. Will this capriccio hold in thee? art sure?

Ber. Go with me to my chamber and advise me.

I'll send her straight away: to-morrow 312

I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.

Par. Why, these balls bound; there's noise in it.

'Tis hard:

A young man married is a man that's marr'd:

Therefore away, and leave her bravely; go: 316

The king has done you wrong: but, hush! 'tis so.

Exit [with Bertram].

Scene Four

[Same. Another Room in the Palace]

Enter Helena and Clown.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly: is she well?

Clo. She is not well; but yet she has her health; she's very merry, but yet she is not well: but thanks be given, she's very well, and 4 wants nothing i' the world; but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be very well, what does she ail that she's not very well? 8

Clo. Truly, she's very well indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clo. One, that she's not in heaven, whither 12

307 furnish me to: equip me for 310 capriccio: whim hold: persist
7 what: in what way

309 To: compared to 314 these . . . it; cf. n.

God send her quickly! the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly!

Enter Parolles.

Par. Bless you, my fortunate lady!

Hel. I hope, sir, I have your good will to 16 have mine own good fortune.

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on;
and to keep them on, have them still. O! my knave, how does my old lady? 20

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why, I say nothing.

Clo. Marry, you are the wiser man; for many 24
a man's tongue shakes out his master's undoing.
To say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title; which is within a very little of nothing. 28

Par. Away! [Before God,] th'art a knave.

Clo. You should have said, sir, before a knave thou'rt a knave; that is, before me thou'rt a knave: this had been truth, sir. 32

Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool; I have found thee.

Clo. Did you find me in yourself, sir? or were you taught to find me? The search, sir, was 36 profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world's pleasure and the increase of laughter.

Par. A good knave, i'faith, and well fed. 40
Madam, my lord will go away to-night;
A very serious business calls on him.
The great prerogative and rite of love,

28 title: value

35 in yourself: by yourself (used punningly)

Which, as your due, time claims, he does acknowledge, 44

But puts it off to a compell'd restraint;
Whose want, and whose delay, is strew'd with sweets,
Which they distil now in the curbed time,
To make the coming hour o'erflow with joy, 48
And pleasure drown the brim.

Hel. What's his will else?

Par. That you will take your instant leave o' the
king,

And make this haste as your own good proceeding,
Strengthen'd with what apology you think 52
May make it probable need.

Hel. What more commands he?

Par. That, having this obtain'd, you presently Attend his further pleasure.

Hel. In everything I wait upon his will. 56

Par. I shall report it so. Exit Parolles.

Hel. [To Clown.] I pray you come, sirrah.
Exit [followed by Clown].

Scene Five

[Another Room in the Same]

Enter Lafeu and Bertram.

Laf. But I hope your lordship thinks not him a soldier.

Ber. Yes, my lord, and of very valiant approof.

Laf. You have it from his own deliverance. 4

45 Postpones it because of an unavoidable necessity

47 curbed time: time of restraint

51 And make this haste appear to arise from your own desires

53 make . . . need: make the necessity plausible

54 this: i.e. permission to depart presently: at once

3 very . . . approof: proved valor

Ber. And by other warranted testimony.

Laf. Then my dial goes not true: I took this lark for a bunting.

Ber. I do assure you, my lord, he is very 8 great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

Laf. I have then sinned against his experience and transgressed against his valour; and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet 12 find in my heart to repent. Here he comes; I pray you, make us friends; I will pursue the amity.

Enter Parolles.

Par. [To Bertram.] These things shall be 16 done, sir.

Laf. Pray you, sir, who's his tailor?

Par. Sir?

Laf. O! I know him well, I, sir. He, sir, 's 20 a good workman, a very good tailor.

Ber. [Aside to Parolles.] Is she gone to the king?

Par. She is.

24

Ber. Will she away to-night?

Par. As you'll have her.

Ber. I have writ my letters, casketed my treasure, Given orders for our horses, and to-night, 28 When I should take possession of the bride, End ere I do begin.

Laf. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner; but one that lies three 32 thirds, and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothings with, should be once heard and thrice beaten. God save you, captain.

6 my . . . true: I am mistaken

9 accordingly: to a corresponding degree

14 pursue: further

Ber. Is there any unkindness between my 36 lord and you, monsieur?

Par. I know not how I have deserved to run into my lord's displeasure.

Laf. You have made shift to run into 't, boots 40 and spurs and all, like him that leaped into the custard; and out of it you'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.

Ber. It may be you have mistaken him, my 44 lord.

Laf. And shall do so ever, though I took him at's prayers. Fare you well, my lord; and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this 48 light nut; the soul of this man is his clothes.
Trust him not in matter of heavy consequence;
I have kept of them tame, and know their natures. Farewell, monsieur: I have spoken better 52 of you than you have or will to deserve at my hand; but we must do good against evil. [Exit.]

Par. An idle lord, I swear.

Ber. I think [not] so. 56

Par. Why, do you not know him?

Ber. Yes, I do know him well; and common speech
Gives him a worthy pass. Here comes my clog.

Enter Helena [followed by Clown].

Hel. I have, sir, as I was commanded from you, 60
Spoke with the king, and have procur'd his leave
For present parting; only, he desires
Some private speech with you.

Ber. I shall obey his will.

38, 39 run into: incur 41, 42 like . . . custard; cf. n.
43 suffer . . . residence: bear being questioned for your presence there
46 do so: i.e. take him amiss (pun on 'mistake')
51 of them: some of (such creatures)
59 pass: reputation 62 present parting: immediate departure

You must not marvel, Helen, at my course, 64
 Which holds not colour with the time, nor does
 The ministration and required office
 On my particular: prepar'd I was not
 For such a business; therefore am I found 68
 So much unsettled. This drives me to entreat you
 That presently you take your way for home;
 And rather muse than ask why I entreat you;
 For my respects are better than they seem, 72
 And my appointments have in them a need
 Greater than shows itself at the first view
 To you that know them not. This to my mother.

[Giving a letter.]

'Twill be two days ere I shall see you, so 76
 I leave you to your wisdom.

Hel. Sir, I can nothing say,
 But that I am your most obedient servant.

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel. And ever shall
 With true observance seek to eke out that 80
 Wherein toward me my homely stars have fail'd
 To equal my great fortune.

Ber. Let that go:
 My haste is very great. Farewell: hie home.

Hel. Pray sir, your pardon.

Ber. Well, what would you say? 84

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe,
 Nor dare I say 'tis mine, and yet it is;
 But, like a timorous thief, most fain would steal
 What law does vouch mine own.

Ber. What would you have? 88

65 holds . . . with: does not seem suitable to

67 particular: part 71 muse: wonder

73 appointments: commands need: necessity

72 respects: motives

Hel. Something, and scarce so much: nothing, indeed.

I would not tell you what I would, my lord:—

Faith, yes;

Strangers and foes do sunder, and not kiss. 92

Ber. I pray you, stay not, but in haste to horse.

Hel. I shall not break your bidding, good my lord.

[To Clown.] Where are my other men? [To Parolles.]

Monsieur, farewell. Exit.

Ber. Go thou toward home; where I will never come 96

Whilst I can shake my sword or hear the drum.

Away! and for our flight.

Par. Bravely, coragio!
[Exeunt.]

ACT THIRD

Scene One

[Florence. A Room in the Duke's Palace]

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence [and] the two Frenchmen [the Lords], with a troop of soldiers.

Duke. So that from point to point now have you heard

The fundamental reasons of this war,
Whose great decision hath much blood let forth,
And more thirsts after.

1. Lord. Holy seems the quarrel 4
Upon your Grace's part; black and fearful
On the opposer.

94 break: disobey
3 decision: act of deciding

98 coragio: courage

Duke. Therefore we marvel much our cousin France
Would in so just a business shut his bosom 8
Against our borrowing prayers.

1. Lord. Good my lord,
The reasons of our state I cannot yield,
But like a common and an outward man,
That the great figure of a council frames 12
By self-unable motion: therefore dare not Say what I think of it, since I have found Myself in my incertain grounds to fail
As often as I guess'd.

Duke. Be it his pleasure. 16

2. Lord. But I am sure the younger of our nature,
That surfeit on their ease, will day by day
Come here for physic.

Duke. Welcome shall they be,
And all the honours that can fly from us 20
Shall on them settle. You know your places well;
When better fall, for your avails they fell.
To-morrow to the field. Flourish. [Exeunt.]

Scene Two

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. It hath happened all as I would have had it, save that he comes not along with her.

Clo. By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man. 4

10 yield: tell

11 But like: except as outward: having no access to councils of state

16 Be . . . pleasure: let us suppose it his will

22 better fall: better places fall vacant for your avails: to your advantage

Count. By what observance, I pray you?

Clo. Why, he will look upon his boot and sing; mend the ruff and sing; ask questions and sing; pick his teeth and sing. I know a man 8 that had this trick of melancholy hold a goodly manor for a song.

Count. [Opening a letter.] Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come. 12

Clo. I have no mind to Isbel since I was at court. Our old lings and our Isbels o' the country are nothing like your old ling and your Isbels o' the court: the brains of my Cupid's knocked 16 out, and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Count. What have we here?

Clo. E'en that you have there. Exit. 20

[Countess reads] a Letter. 'I have sent you a daughter-in-law: she hath recovered the king, and undone me. I have wedded her, not bedded her; and sworn to make the "not" eternal. You shall 24 hear I am run away: know it before the report come. If there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you.

Your unfortunate son, 28
Bertram.'

This is not well, rash and unbridled boy,
To fly the favours of so good a king!
To pluck his indignation on thy head
By the misprising of a maid too virtuous
For the contempt of empire!

32

5 observance: observation

14 lings: a kind of fish

27 hold: keep

33 misprising: despising

22 recovered: healed

32 pluck: bring down

34 For even an emperor to look down upon

[Re-]enter Clown.

Clo. O madam! yonder is heavy news within between two soldiers and my young lady. 36

Count. What is the matter?

Clo. Nay, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort; your son will not be killed so soon as I thought he would. 40

Count. Why should he be killed?

Clo. So say I, madam, if he run away, as I hear he does: the danger is in standing to't;
that's the loss of men, though it be the getting 44 of children. Here they come will tell you more;
for my part, I only hear your son was run away.

[Exit.]

Enter Helen and two Gentlemen [the French Lords].

1. Gen. Save you, good madam.

Hel. Madam, my lord is gone, for ever gone. 48

2. Gen. Do not say so.

Count. Think upon patience. Pray you, gentlemen,
I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief,
That the first face of neither, on the start, 52
Can woman me unto 't. Where is my son, I pray you?

2. Gen. Madam, he's gone to serve the Duke of Florence:

We met him thitherward; for thence we came,
And, after some dispatch in hand at court, 56
Thither we bend again.

Hel. Look on his letter, madam; here's my passport.
'When thou canst get the ring upon my finger, which never shall come off, and show me a child 60 begotten of thy body that I am father to, then

52 on the start: on sudden appearance

53 woman me unto 't: make me show a woman's emotions

55 thitherward: on his way thither

56 dispatch: business

call me husband: but in such a "then" I write a "never." "

This is a dreadful sentence. 64

Count. Brought you this letter, gentlemen?

1. Gen. Ay, madam;

And for the contents' sake are sorry for our pains.

Count. I prithee, lady, have a better cheer;

If thou engrossest all the griefs are thine, 68

Thou robb'st me of a moiety: he was my son,

But I do wash his name out of my blood,

And thou art all my child. Towards Florence is he?

2. Gen. Ay, madam.

Count. And to be a soldier? 72

2. Gen. Such is his noble purpose; and, believe 't,

The duke will lay upon him all the honour

That good convenience claims.

Count. Return you thither?

1. Gen. Ay, madam, with the swiftest wing of speed. 76

Hel. 'Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.'

'Tis bitter.

Count. Find you that there?

Hel. Ay, madam.

1. Gen. 'Tis but the boldness of his hand, haply, which his heart was not consenting to. 80

Count. Nothing in France until he have no wife!

There's nothing here that is too good for him

But only she; and she deserves a lord

That twenty such rude boys might tend upon, 84

And call her hourly mistress. Who was with him?

1. Gen. A servant only, and a gentleman

Which I have some time known.

67 cheer: countenance

68 If you take exclusive possession of all the sorrows that are yours

69 moiety: half

75 good convenience claims: propriety permits

Count. Parolles, was it not?

1. Gen. Ay, my good lady, he. 88

Count. A very tainted fellow, and full of wickedness.
My son corrupts a well-derived nature
With his inducement.

1. Gen. Indeed, good lady,
The fellow has a deal of that too much, 92
Which holds him much to have.

Count. Y'are welcome, gentlemen.
I will entreat you, when you see my son,
To tell him that his sword can never win 96
The honour that he loses: more I'll entreat you
Written to bear along.

2. Gen. We serve you, madam,
In that and all your worthiest affairs.

Count. Not so, but as we change our courtesies. 100
Will you draw near?

Exit [with the two Gentlemen].

Hel. 'Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.'
Nothing in France until he has no wife!
Thou shalt have none, Rousillon, none in France; 104
Then hast thou all again. Poor lord! is 't I
That chase thee from thy country, and expose
Those tender limbs of thine to the event
Of the none-sparing war? and is it I 108
That drive thee from the sportive court, where thou
Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark
Of smoky muskets? O you leaden messengers,
That ride upon the violent speed of fire, 112
Fly with false aim; move the still-pairing air,
That sings with piercing; do not touch my lord!

90 well-derived nature: excellent natural disposition

91 With his inducement: through his influence

92, 93 Cf. n.

99 worthiest: most worthy

107 event: consequence

113 still-pairing: ever reuniting

Whoever shoots at him, I set him there;
 Whoever charges on his forward breast, 116
 I am the caitiff that dó hold him to 't;
 And, though I kill him not, I am the cause
 His death was so effected: better 'twere
 I met the ravin lion when he roar'd 120
 With sharp constraint of hunger; better 'twere
 That all the miseries which nature owes
 Were mine at once. No, come thou home, Rousillon,
 Whence honour but of danger wins a scar, 124
 As oft it loses all: I will be gone;
 My being here it is that holds thee hence:
 Shall I stay here to do 't? no, no, although
 The air of paradise did fan the house, 128
 And angels offic'd all: I will be gone,
 That pitiful rumour may report my flight,
 To console thine ear. Come, night; end, day!
 For with the dark, poor thief, I'll steal away. 132
Exit.

Scene Three

[Florence. Before the Duke's Palace]

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, Rousillon, drum and trumpets, Soldiers, Parolles.

Duke. The general of our horse thou art; and we,
 Great in our hope, lay our best love and credence
 Upon thy promising fortune.

Ber. Sir, it is
 A charge too heavy for my strength, but yet 4
 We'll strive to bear it for your worthy sake

120 ravin: ravenous

124 but . . . scar: wins nothing except a scar from danger

129 offic'd all: did all the duties of the household

130 pitiful: compassionate

131 console: console

To th' extreme edge of hazard.

Duke. Then go thou forth,
And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm
As thy auspicious mistress!

Ber. This very day, 8
Great Mars, I put myself into thy file:
Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove
A lover of thy drum, hater of love. Exeunt omnes.

Scene Four

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter Countess and Steward.

Count. Alas! and would you take the letter of her?
Might you not know she would do as she has done,
By sending me a letter? Read it again.

[Steward reads a] Letter. 'I am Saint Jaques' pilgrim, thither gone: 4

Ambitious love hath so in me offended
That bare-foot plod I the cold ground upon
With sainted vow my faults to have amended.
Write, write, that from the bloody course of war, 8
My dearest master, your dear son, may hie:
Bless him at home in peace, whilst I from far
His name with zealous fervour sanctify:
His taken labours bid him me forgive; 12
I, his despiteful Juno, sent him forth
From courtly friends, with camping foes to live,
Where death and danger dogs the heels of worth:

He is too good and fair for Death and me; 16
Whom I myself embrace, to set him free.'

Count. Ah, what sharp stings are in her mildest words!

Rinaldo, you did never lack advice so much,
As letting her pass so: had I spoke with her, 20
I could have well diverted her intents,
Which thus she hath prevented.

Stew. Pardon me, madam:

If I had given you this at over-night,
She might have been o'erta'en; and yet she writes, 24
Pursuit would be but vain.

Count. What angel shall

Bless this unworthy husband? he cannot thrive,
Unless her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear,
And loves to grant, reprieve him from the wrath 28
Of greatest justice. Write, write, Rinaldo,
To this unworthy husband of his wife.

Let every word weigh heavy of her worth
That he does weigh too light: my greatest grief, 32
Though little he do feel it, set down sharply.

Dispatch the most convenient messenger:
When haply he shall hear that she is gone,
He will return; and hope I may that she, 36

Hearing so much, will speed her foot again,
Led hither by pure love. Which of them both
Is dearest to me I have no skill in sense
To make distinction. Provide this messenger. 40

My heart is heavy and mine age is weak;
Grief would have tears, and sorrow bids me speak.

Exeunt.

Scene Five

[Without the Walls of Florence]

A tucket afar off. Enter old Widow of Florence, her daughter [Diana], Violenta and Mariana, with other Citizens.

Wid. Nay, come; for if they do approach the city, we shall lose all the sight.

Dia. They say the French count has done most honourable service. 4

Wid. It is reported that he has taken their greatest commander, and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. We have lost our labour; they are gone a contrary way: 8 hark! you may know by their trumpets.

Mar. Come; let's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl: the honour of a maid 12 is her name, and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

Mar. I know that knave, hang him! one 16 Parolles: a filthy officer he is in those suggestions for the young earl. Beware of them, Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they 20 go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wrack of maidenhood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed 24 with the twigs that threatens them. I hope I need not to advise you further; but I hope your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known but the 23 modesty which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.

Wid. I hope so.

Enter Helen [in the dress of a Pilgrim].

Look, here comes a pilgrim:

I know she will lie at my house; thither they 32 send one another. I'll question her.

God save you, pilgrim! whither are [you] bound?

Hel. To Saint Jaques le Grand.

Where do the palmers lodge, I do beseech you? 36

Wid. At the Saint Francis, here beside the port.

Hel. Is this the way?

Wid. Ay, marry, is 't.

A march afar.

Hark you!

They come this way. If you will tarry, holy pilgrim,
But till the troops come by, 40

I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd:

The rather, for I think I know your hostess

As ample as myself.

Hel. Is it yourself?

Wid. If you shall please so, pilgrim. 44

Hel. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid. You came, I think, from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Here you shall see a countryman of yours
That has done worthy service.

Hel. His name, I pray you. 48

Dia. The Count Rousillon: know you such a one?

30 fear me: have fears for me

43 ample: well

37 port: gate

45 stay upon: await

Hel. But by the ear, that hears most nobly of him;
His face I know not.

Dia. Whatsome'er he is,
He's bravely taken here. He stole from France, 52
As 'tis reported: for the king had married him Against his liking. Think you it is so?

Hel. Ay, surely, mere the truth: I know his lady.

Dia. There is a gentleman that serves the count 56
Reports but coarsely of her.

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parolles.

Hel. O, I believe with him.
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great count himself, she is too mean 60
To have her name repeated: all her deserving
Is a reserved honesty, and that I have not heard examin'd.

Dia. Alas, poor lady!
'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife 64
Of a detesting lord.

Wid. I write, good creature, wheresoe'er she is,
Her heart weighs sadly. This young maid might do her

A shrewd turn if she pleas'd.

Hel. How do you mean? 68
May be the amorous count solicits her
In the unlawful purpose.

Wid. He does, indeed;
And brokes with all that can in such a suit
Corrupt the tender honour of a maid: 72

50 by the ear: by hearsay

55 mere the truth: the simple truth

59 In . . . praise: as a subject of formal laudation

68 shrewd: evil

But she is arm'd for him and keeps her guard
In honestest defence.

Drum and colours. Enter Count Rousillon, Parolles, and the whole army.

Mar. The gods forbid else!

Wid. So, now they come.

That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son; 76

That, Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia. He;

That with the plume: 'tis a most gallant fellow;
I would he lov'd his wife: if he were honest,
He were much goodlier. Is 't not a handsome gentleman? 80

Hel. I like him well.

Dia. 'Tis pity he is not honest. Yond's that same knave

That leads him to these places: were I his lady,
I would poison that vile rascal.

Hel. Which is he? 84

Dia. That jackanapes with scarfs. Why is he melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i' the battle.

Par. Lose our drum! well. 88

Mar. He's shrewdly vexed at something.
Look, he has spied us.

Wid. Marry, hang you!

Mar. And your courtesy, for a ring-carrier! 92

Exit [Bertram, with Parolles and the army].

Wid. The troop is past. Come, pilgrim, I will bring you

 There's four or five, to great Saint Jaques bound,
 Already at my house.

Hel. I humbly thank you. 96

Please it this matron and this gentle maid
 To eat with us to-night, the charge and thanking Shall be for me; and, to requite you further,
 I will bestow some precepts of this virgin 100
 Worthy the note.

Both. We'll take your offer kindly.

Exeunt.

Scene Six

[Camp before Florence]

Enter Count Rousillon and the Frenchmen [the Lords], as at first.

1. Lord. Nay, good my lord, put him to 't: let him have his way.

2. Lord. If your lordship find him not a hilding, hold me no more in your respect. 4

1. Lord. On my life, my lord, a bubble.

Ber. Do you think I am so far deceived in him?

1. Lord. Believe it, my lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to 8 speak of him as my kinsman, he's a most notable coward, an infinite and endless liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality worthy your lordship's entertainment. 12

2. Lord. It were fit you knew him, lest, re-

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

2. Lord. None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently 20 undertake to do.

1. Lord. I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him: such I will have whom I am sure he knows not from the enemy. 24 We will bind and hoodwink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the leaguer of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents. Be but your lordship present at 28 his examination: if he do not, for the promise of his life and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that 32 with the divine forfeit of his soul upon oath, never trust my judgment in anything.

2. Lord. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum! he says he has a stratagem 36 for 't. When your lordship sees the bottom of his success in 't, and to what metal this counterfeited lump of ours will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining 40 cannot be removed. Here he comes.

Enter Parolles.

his drum in any hand. 44

Ber. How now, monsieur! this drum sticks sorely in your disposition.

2. Lord. A pox on't! let it go: 'tis but a drum. 48

Par. 'But a drum!' Is't 'but a drum'? A drum so lost! There was excellent command, to charge in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own soldiers! 52

2. Lord. That was not to be blamed in the command of the service: it was a disaster of war that Cæsar himself could not have prevented if he had been there to command. 56

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our success: some dishonour we had in the loss of that drum; but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have been recovered. 60

Ber. It might; but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered. But that the merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drum or 64 another, or hic jacet.

Ber. Why, if you have a stomach, to't, monsieur;
if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into his native 68 quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprise and go on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speed well in it, the duke shall

Par. By the hand of a soldier, I will undertake it.

Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.

Par. I'll about it this evening: and I will presently pen down my dilemmas, encourage myself in my certainty, put myself into my mortal preparation, and by midnight look to hear further from me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his Grace you are gone about it?

Par. I know not what the success will be, my lord, but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know th' art valiant, and, to the possibility of thy soldiership, will subscribe for thee. Farewell.

Par. I love not many words.

Exit.

1. Lord. No more than a fish loves water. Is not this a strange fellow, my lord, that so confidently seems to undertake this business, which he knows is not to be done; damns himself to do, and dares better be damned than to do 't?

2. Lord. You do not know him, my lord, as we do: certain it is, that he will steal himself into a man's favour, and for a week escape a great deal of discoveries; but when you find him out you have him ever after.

bost him, you shall see his fall to-night; for,
indeed, he is not for your lordship's respect. 108

2. Lord. We'll make you some sport with the fox ere we case him. He was first smoked by the old Lord Lafeu: when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall find 112 him; which you shall see this very night.

1. Lord. I must go look my twigs: he shall be caught.

Ber. Your brother he shall go along with me. 116

1. Lord. As 't please your lordship: I'll leave you. [Exit.]

Ber. Now will I lead you to the house, and show you
The lass I spoke of.

2. Lord. But you say she's honest. 120

Ber. That's all the fault. I spoke with her but once,
And found her wondrous cold; but I sent to her,
By this same coxcomb that we have i' the wind,
Tokens and letters which she did re-send; 124
And this is all I have done. She's a fair creature;
Will you go see her?

Scene Seven

[Florence. A Room in the Widow's House]

Enter Helen and Widow.

Hel. If you misdoubt me that I am not she,
I know not how I shall assure you further,
But I shall lose the grounds I work upon.

Wid. Though my estate be fall'n, I was well born, 4
Nothing acquainted with these businesses;
And would not put my reputation now
In any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you.
First, give me trust, the count he is my husband, 8
And what to your sworn counsel I have spoken
Is so from word to word; and then you cannot,
By the good aid that I of you shall borrow,
Err in bestowing it.

Wid. I should believe you: 12
For you have show'd me that which well approves
Y'are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purse of gold,
And let me buy your friendly help thus far,
Which I will over-pay and pay again 16
When I have found it. The count he woos your daughter,
Lays down his wanton siege before her beauty,
Resolv'd to carry her: let her in fine consent,
As we'll direct her how 'tis best to bear it. 20
Now, his important blood will nought deny

That she'll demand: a ring the county wears,
 That downward hath succeeded in his house
 From son to son, some four or five descents 24
 Since the first father wore it: this ring he holds
 In most rich choice; yet, in his idle fire,
 To buy his will, it would not seem too dear,
 Howe'er repented after.

Wid. Now I see 28
 The bottom of your purpose.

Hel. You see it lawful then. It is no more,
 But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
 Desires this ring, appoints him an encounter, 32
 In fine, delivers me to fill the time, Herself most chastely absent. After,
 To marry her, I'll add three thousand crowns
 To what is past already.

Wid. I have yielded. 36
 Instruct my daughter how she shall persevere,
 That time and place with this deceit so lawful
 May prove coherent. Every night he comes
 With musics of all sorts and songs compos'd 40
 To her unworthiness: it nothing steads us
 To chide him from our eaves, for he persists
 As if his life lay on 't.

Hel. Why then to-night
 Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed, 44
 Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
 And lawful meaning in a lawful act,
 Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact.
 But let's about it. [Exeunt.] 48

ACT FOURTH

Scene One

[Without the Florentine Camp]

Enter one of the Frenchmen [First Lord] with five or six other Soldiers in ambush.

1. Lord. He can come no other way but by this hedge-corner. When you sally upon him, speak what terrible language you will: though you understand it not yourselves, no 4 matter; for we must not seem to understand him, unless some one among us, whom we must produce for an interpreter.

1. Sold. Good captain, let me be the in- 8 terpreter.

1. Lord. Art not acquainted with him? knows he not thy voice?

1. Sold. No, sir, I warrant you. 12

1. Lord. But what linsey-woolsey hast thou to speak to us again?

1. Sold. E'en such as you speak to me.

1. Lord. He must think us some band of 16 strangers i' th' adversary's entertainment. Now, he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages; therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak one to 20 another; so we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose: chough's language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you, interpreter, you must seem very politic. But couch, ho! 24 here he comes, to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Ten o'clock: within these three hours 'twill be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done? It must be a very plausible invention that carries it. They begin to smoke me, and disgraces have of late knocked too often at my door. I find my tongue is too foolhardy; but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

1. Lord. [Aside.] This is the first truth that e'er thine own tongue was guilty of. 36

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts and say I got them in exploit. Yet slight ones will not carry it: they will say, 'Came you off with so little?' and great ones I dare not give. Wherefore, what's the instance? Tongue, I must put you into a butter-woman's mouth, and buy myself another of Bajazet's mule, if you prattle me into these perils. 40

1. Lord. Is it possible he should know what he is, and be that he is? 48

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword. 52

1. Lord. We cannot afford you so.

Par. Or the baring of my beard, and to say it was in stratagem.

29 plausible: plausible

46 Bajazet's mule; cf. n.

54 baring: shaving

1. Lord. 'Twould not do. 56

Par. Or to drown my clothes, and say I was stripped.

1. Lord. Hardly serve.

Par. Though I swore I leapt from the 60 window of the citadel—

1. Lord. How deep?

Par. Thirty fathom.

1. Lord. Three great oaths would scarce 64 make that be believed.

Par. I would I had any drum of the enemy's: I would swear I recovered it.

1. Lord. You shall hear one anon. 68

Par. A drum now of the enemy's!

Alarum within.

1. Lord. Throca movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All. Cargo, cargo, cargo, villianda par corbo, cargo.

[They seize and blindfold him.]

Par. O! ransom, ransom! Do not hide mine eyes. 72

Inter. Boskos thromuldo boskos.

Par. I know you are the Muskos' regiment;
And I shall lose my life for want of language.
If there be here German, or Dane, low Dutch, 76
Italian, or French, let him speak to me:
I'll discover that which shall undo
The Florentine.

Inter. Boskos vauvado:

I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue: 80
Kerelybonto, sir,
Betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen poniards
Are at thy bosom.

Par. O!

Inter. O! pray, pray, pray.

Manka revania dulce.

1. Lord. Oscorbidulchos volivorco. 84

Inter. The general is content to spare thee yet,
And, hoodwink'd as thou art, will lead thee on
To gather from thee: haply thou may'st inform Something to save thy life.

Par. O! let me live, 88
And all the secrets of our camp I'll show,
Their force, their purposes; nay, I'll speak that
Which you will wonder at.

Inter. But wilt thou faithfully?

Par. If I do not, damn me.

Inter. Acordo linta. 92
Come on; thou art granted space.

Exit [with Parolles guarded].

A short alarum within.

1. Lord. Go, tell the Count Rousillon and my brother
We have caught the woodcock, and will keep him muffled

Till we do hear from them.

Sold. Captain, I will. 96

1. Lord. A' will betray us all unto ourselves:
Inform on that.

Sold. So I will, sir. [Exit.]

1. Lord. Till then, I'll keep him dark and safely lock'd. Exit.

Scene Two

[Florence. A Room in the Widow's House]

Enter Bertram and the maid called Diana.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fontibell.

Dia. No, my good lord, Diana.

Ber. Titled goddess;

And worth it, with addition! But, fair soul,
In your fine frame hath love no quality? 4

If the quick fire of youth light not your mind,
You are no maiden, but a monument:

When you are dead, you should be such a one
As you are now, for you are cold and stern; 8

And now you should be as your mother was
When your sweet self was got.

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dia. No:

My mother did but duty; such, my lord, 12
As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more o' that!

I prithee do not strive against my vows.
I was compell'd to her; but I love thee
By love's own sweet constraint, and will for ever 16
Do thee all rights of service.

Dia. Ay, so you serve us

Till we serve you; but when you have our roses,
You barely leave our thorns to prick ourselves
And mock us with our bareness.

Ber. How have I sworn! 20

Dia. 'Tis not the many oaths that makes the truth,
But the plain single vow that is vow'd true.

What is not holy, that we swear not by,
But take the high'st to witness: then, pray you, tell me, 24

If I should swear by Jove's great attributes
I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths,
When I did love you ill? This has no holding,
To swear by him whom I protest to love, 28
That I will work against him: therefore your oaths
Are words and poor conditions, but unseal'd,
At least in my opinion.

Ber. Change it, change it.
Be not so holy-cruel: love is holy; 32
And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts
That you do charge men with. Stand no more off,
But give thyself unto my sick desires,
Who then recovers: say thou art mine, and ever 36
My love as it begins shall so persevere.

Dia. I see that men make rope's in such a scarre
That we'll forsake ourselves. Give me that ring.

Ber. I'll lend it thee, my dear; but have no power 40
To give it from me.

Dia. Will you not, my lord?

Ber. It is an honour longing to our house,
Bequeathed down from many ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world 44
In me to lose.

Dia. Mine honour's such a ring:
My chastity's the jewel of our house,
Bequeathed down from many ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world 48
In me to lose. Thus your own proper wisdom

Ber. Here, take my ring:
My house, mine honour, yea, my life, be thine, 52
And I'll be bid by thee.

Dia. When midnight comes, knock at my chamber-window:

I'll order take my mother shall not hear.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth, 56
When you have conquer'd my yet maiden bed,
Remain there but an hour, nor speak to me.
My reasons are most strong, and you shall know them
When back again this ring shall be deliver'd: 60
And on your finger in the night I'll put Another ring that, what in time proceeds,
May token to the future our past deeds.
Adieu, till then; then, fail not. You have won 64
A wife of me, though there my hope be done.

Ber. A heaven on earth I have won by wooing thee.
[Exit.]

Dia. For which live long to thank both heaven and me!

You may so in the end. 68

My mother told me just how he would woo
As if she sat in's heart; she says all men
Have the like oaths: he had sworn to marry me
When his wife's dead; therefore I'll lie with him 72
When I am buried. Since Frenchmen are so braid, Marry that will, I live and die a maid:
Only in this disguise I think 't no sin

Scene Three

[The Florentine Camp]

Enter the two French Captains [the Lords] and some two or three Soldiers.

1. Lord. You have not given him his mother's letter?

2. Lord. I have delivered it an hour since: there is something in't that stings his nature, 4 for on the reading it he changed almost into another man.

1. Lord. He has much worthy blame laid upon him for shaking off so good a wife and so 8 sweet a lady.

2. Lord. Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the king, who had even tuned his bounty to sing happiness to him. 12 I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you.

1. Lord. When you have spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it. 16

2. Lord. He hath perverted a young gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown; and this night he fleshes his will in the spoil of her honour: he hath given her his 20 monumental ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.

1. Lord. Now, God delay our rebellion! as we are ourselves, what things are we! 24 in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhorred ends, so he that in this action 28 contrives against his own nobility, in his proper stream o'erflows himself.

1. Lord. Is it not meant damnable in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We 32 shall not then have his company to-night?

2. Lord. Not till after midnight, for he is dieted to his hour.

1. Lord. That approaches apace: I would 36 gladly have him see his company anatomized, that he might take a measure of his own judgments, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit. 40

2. Lord. We will not meddle with him till he come, for his presence must be the whip of the other.

1. Lord. In the meantime what hear you 44 of these wars?

2. Lord. I hear there is an overture of peace.

1. Lord. Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded. 48

2. Lord. What will Count Rousillon do then? will he travel higher, or return again into France?

1. Lord. I perceive by this demand, you 52 are not altogether of his council.

2. Lord. Let it be forbid, sir; so should I be a great deal of his act.

2. Lord. How is this justified? 64

1. Lord. The stronger part of it by her own letters, which makes her story true, even to the point of her death: her death itself, which could not be her office to say is come, was faith- 68 fully confirmed by the rector of the place.

2. Lord. Hath the count all this intelligence?

1. Lord. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of 72 the verity.

2. Lord. I am heartily sorry that he'll be glad of this.

1. Lord. How mightily sometimes we 76 make us comforts of our losses!

2. Lord. And how mightily some other times we drown our gain in tears! The great dignity that his valour hath here acquired for 80 him shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.

1. Lord. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would 84 be proud if our faults whipped them not; and our crimes would despair if they were not cherished by our virtues.

Enter a Messenger.

How now! where's your master? 88

Mess. He met the duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave: his lordship will next morning for France. The duke hath offered him letters of commendations to the king. 92

2. Lord. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

Enter Count Rousillon.

1. Lord. They cannot be too sweet for the king's tartness. Here's his lordship now. 96
How now, my lord! is 't not after midnight?

Ber. I have to-night dispatched sixteen businesses, a month's length apiece, by an abstract of success: I have congied with the 100 duke, done my adieu with his nearest, buried a wife, mourned for her, writ to my lady mother I am returning, entertained my convoy, and between these main parcels of dispatch effected 104 many nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

2. Lord. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it re- 108 quires haste of your lordship.

Ber. I mean, the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter. But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the 112 soldier? Come, bring forth this counterfeit

116

[Exeunt Soldiers.]

Has sat i' the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he 120 carry himself?

1. Lord. I have told your lordship already, the stocks carry him. But to answer you as you would be understood, he weeps like a wench 124 that had shed her milk: he hath confessed himself to Morgan—whom he supposes to be a friar—from the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting i' the 128 stocks: and what think you he hath confessed?

Ber. Nothing of me, has a'?

2. Lord. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in 't, 132 as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Enter Parolles with his Interpreter [and other Soldiers].

Ber. A plague upon him! muffled! he can say nothing of me: hush! hush! 136

1. Lord. Hoodman comes! Portotartarossa.

Inter. He calls for the tortures: what will you say without 'em?

Par. I will confess what I know without constraint: if ye pinch me like a pasty, I can say no more.

Inter. Bosko chimurcho.

144

1. Lord. Boblibindo chicurmurco.

Inter. You are a merciful general. Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.

148

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

Inter. 'First, demand of him how many horse the duke is strong.' What say you to that?

Par. Five or six thousand; but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

Inter. Shall I set down your answer so?

150

Par. Do: I'll take the sacrament on 't, how and which way you will.

Ber. All's one to him. What a past-saving slave is this!

1. Lord. Y' are deceived, my lord: this is Monsieur Parolles, the gallant militarist—that was his own phrase—that had the whole theoretic of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape of his dagger.

2. Lord. I will never trust a man again for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have everything in him by wearing his apparel neatly.

Inter. Well, that's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said—I will say true—or thereabouts, set down, for I'll speak truth.

1. Lord. He's very near the truth in this.

Ber. But I con him no thanks for 't, in the nature he delivers it. 176

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you, say.

Inter. Well, that's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, sir. A truth's a truth; the rogues are marvellous poor. 180

Inter. 'Demand of him, of what strength they are a-foot.' What say you to that?

Par. By my troth, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see: 184
 Spurio, a hundred and fifty; Sebastian, so many;
 Corambus, so many; Jaques, so many; Guiltian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Gratii, two hundred fifty each; mine own company, Chitopher, Vaumond, 188 Bentii, two hundred fifty each: so that the muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll; half of the which dare not shake the snow from off their 192 cassocks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shall be done to him?

1. Lord. Nothing, but let him have thanks.
 Demand of him my condition, and what credit 196
 I have with the duke.

Inter. Well, that's set down. 'You shall demand of him, whether one Captain Dumaine be i' the camp, a Frenchman; what his reputa- 200
 tion is with the duke; what his valour, honesty, and expertness in wars; or whether he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighing sums of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt.' What say you 204 to this? what do you know of it?

Par. I beseech you, let me answer to the Inter. Do you know this Captain Du-maine?

Par. I know him: a' was a botcher's 'prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for 212 getting the shrieve's fool with child; a dumb innocent, that could not say him nay.

[Dumaine lifts up his hand in anger.]

Ber. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; though I know his brains are forfeit to the next 216
tile that falls.

Inter. Well, is this captain in the Duke of Florence's camp?

Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lousy. 220

1. Lord. Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.

Inter. What is his reputation with the duke? 224

Par. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine, and writ to me this other day to turn him out o' the band: I think I have his letter in my pocket. 228

Inter. Marry, we'll search.

Par. In good sadness, I do not know: either it is there, or it is upon a file with the duke's other letters in my tent. 232

Inter. Here 'tis; here's a paper; shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it or no.

Ber. Our interpreter does it well. 236

1. Lord. Excellently.

Inter. 'Dian, the count's a fool, and full of gold—'

Par. That is not the duke's letter, sir; that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurements of one Count Rousillon, a foolish idle boy, but for all that very ruttish. I pray you, sir, put it up again. 244

Inter. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour.

Par. My meaning in't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid; for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds. 248

Ber. Damnable both-sides rogue! 252

Inter. 'When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it;

After he scores, he never pays the score:

Half won is match well made; match, and well make it;

He ne'er pays after-debts; take it before, 256

And say a soldier, Dian, told thee this:

Men are to mell with, boys are not to kiss;

For count of this, the count's a fool, I know it,

Who pays before, but not when he does owe it. 260

Thine, as he vow'd to thee in thine ear,

Parolles.'

Ber. He shall be whipped through the army with this rime in's forehead. 264

1. Lord. This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold linguist and the armipotent soldier.

Ber. I could endure anything before but a 268 cat, and now he's a cat to me.

Inter. I perceive, sir, by our general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, sir, in any case! not that I am 272 afraid to die, but that, my offences being many,
I would repent out the remainder of nature.
Let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i' the stocks, or anywhere, so I may live. 276

Inter. We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely: therefore, once more to this Captain Dumaine. You have answered to his reputation with the duke and to his valour: 280
what is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloister;
for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus;
he professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking 284
'em he is stronger than Hercules; he will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool; drunkenness is his best virtue, for he will be swine-drunk, and in his sleep he 288 does little harm, save to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty: he has everything that an honest man 292 should not have; what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

1. Lord. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? A 296 pox upon him for me! he's more and more a cat.

Inter. What say you to his expertness in war?

Par. Faith, sir, has led the drum before 300

the English tragedians—to belie him I will not—and more of his soldiership I know not; except, in that country, he had the honour to be the officer at a place there called Mile-end, to 304 instruct for the doubling of files. I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain.

1. Lord. He hath out-villained villainy so 308 far, that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him! he's a cat still.

Inter. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not to ask you if gold will corrupt 312 him to revolt.

Par. Sir, for a cardecu he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut th' entail from all remainders, and a 316 perpetual succession for it perpetually.

Inter. What's his brother, the other Captain Dumaine?

2. Lord. Why does he ask him of me? 320

Inter. What's he?

Par. E'en a crow o' the same nest; not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil. He excels his 324 brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreat he outruns any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the cramp. 328

Inter. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse, Count Rousillon. 332

Par. [Aside.] I'll no more drumming; a plague of all drums! Only to seem to deserve 336 well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy the count, have I run into this danger. Yet who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken? 340

Inter. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die. The general says, you, that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very 344 nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use: therefore you must die. Come, headsman, off with his head.

Par. O Lord, sir, let me live, or let me see my 348 death!

Inter. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends. [Unmuffling him.] So, look about you: know you any here? 352

Ber. Good morrow, noble captain.

2. Lord. God bless you, Captain Parolles.

1. Lord. God save you, noble captain.

2. Lord. Captain, what greeting will you 356 to my Lord Lafeu? I am for France.

1. Lord. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf of the Count Rousillon? an I were not a very 360 coward I'd compel it of you; but fare you well.

Exeunt [all except Parolles and Interpreter].

Inter. You are undone, captain, all but your scarf; that has a knot on 't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crushed with a plot? 364

337 supposition: imagination

357 I am for: I am about to set out for

360 very: complete

Inter. If you could find out a country where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare ye well, sir; I am for France 368 too: we shall speak of you there. Exit.

Par. Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great 'Twould burst at this. Captain I'll be no more; But I will eat and drink, and sleep as soft 372 As captain shall: simply the thing I am Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart, Let him fear this; for it will come to pass That every braggart shall be found an ass. 376 Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and Parolles, live Safest in shame! being fool'd, by foolery thrive! There's place and means for every man alive. I'll after them. Exit. 380

Scene Four

[Florence. A Room in the Widow's House]

Enter Helen, Widow, and Diana.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,
One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my surety; 'fore whose throne 'tis needful,
Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel. 4
Time was I did him a desired office,
Dear almost as his life; which gratitude
Through flinty Tartar's bosom would peep forth,
And answer, thanks. I duly am inform'd 8
His Grace is at Marseilles; to which place
We have convenient convoy. You must know,

4 perfect mine intents: carry out my purposes

9 Marseilles; cf. n.

I am supposed dead: the army breaking,
My husband hies him home; where, heaven aiding, 12
And by the leave of my good lord the king,
We'll be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle madam,
You never had a servant to whose trust
Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Nor you, mistress, 16
Ever a friend whose thoughts more truly labour
To recompense your love. Doubt not but heaven
Hath brought me up to be your daughter's dower,
As it hath fated her to be my motive 20
And helper to a husband. But, O strange men!
That can such sweet use make of what they hate,
When saucy trusting of the cozen'd thoughts
Defiles the pitchy night: so lust doth play 24
With what it loathes for that which is away.
But more of this hereafter. You, Diana,
Under my poor instructions yet must suffer
Something in my behalf.

Dia. Let death and honesty 28
Go with your impositions, I am yours,
Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet, I pray you:
But with the word the time will bring on summer,
When briers shall have leaves as well as thorns, 32
And be as sweet as sharp. We must away;
Our wagon is prepar'd, and time revives us:
All's well that ends well: still the fine's the crown;
Whate'er the course, the end is the renown. 36

Exeunt.

Scene Five

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter Clown, old Lady [the Countess], and Lafeu.

Laf. No, no, no; your son was misled with a snipt-taffeta fellow there, whose villainous saffron would have made all the unbaked and doughy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter- 4 in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanced by the king than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

Count. I would I had not known him; it was 8 the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman that ever nature had praise for creating. If she had partaken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her 12 a more rooted love.

Laf. 'Twas a good lady, 'twas a good lady: we may pick a thousand sallets ere we light on such another herb. 16

Clo. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet-marjoram of the sallet, or, rather the herb of grace.

Laf. They are not herbs, you knave; they are nose-herbs. 20

Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir; I have not much skill in grass.

Laf. Whether dost thou profess thyself, a knave, or a fool? 24

Clo. A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a knave at a man's.

Laf. Your distinction?

2 snipt-taffeta: dressed in slashed taffeta garments saffron: yellow dye (used in pastry) 11 dearest: most grievous 15 sallets: salads 18 herb of grace: rue
19 herbs: edible herbs 20 nose-herbs: scented flowers

Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife, and 28 do his service.

Laf. So you were a knave at his service, indeed.

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble, 32
sir, to do her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knave and fool.

Clo. At your service. 36

Laf. No, no, no.

Clo. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who's that? a Frenchman? 40

Clo. Faith, sir, a' has an English name; but his fisnomy is more hotter in France than there.

Laf. What prince is that? 44

Clo. The black prince, sir; alias, the prince of darkness; alias, the devil.

Laf. Hold thee, there's my purse. I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou 48 talkest of: serve him still.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the 52 prince of the world; let his nobility remain in's court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter:
some that humble themselves may; but the 56 many will be too chill and tender, and they'll be for the flowery way that leads to the broad gate and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy ways, I begin to be aweary of 60 thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways: let my horses be well looked to, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they 64 shall be jade's tricks, which are their own right by the law of nature. Exit.

Laf. A shrewd knave and an unhappy.

Count. So a' is. My lord that's gone made 68 himself much sport out of him: by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sauciness; and, indeed, he has no pace, but runs where he will. 72

Laf. I like him well; 'tis not amiss. And I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good lady's death, and that my lord your son was upon his return home, I moved the king my 76 master to speak in the behalf of my daughter; which, in the minority of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose. His highness hath promised me to do 80 it; and to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord, 84 and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty: a' will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him 88 that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted.

Count. You need but plead your honourable 96 privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter;
but I thank my God it holds yet.

[Re-]enter Clown.

Clo. O madam! yonder's my lord your son 100 with a patch of velvet on's face: whether there be a scar under it or no, the velvet knows; but
cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek 104 is worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honour; so belike is that.

Clo. But it is your carbonadoed face. 108

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you: I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

Clo. Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats and most courteous feathers, which 112
bow the head and nod at every man. Exeunt.

ACT FIFTH

Scene One

[Marseilles. A Street]Enter Helen, Widow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting, day and night,
 Must wear your spirits low; we cannot help it:
 But since you have made the days and nights as one,
 To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs, 4
 Be bold you do so grow in my requital
 As nothing can unroot you. In happy time!

Enter a gentle Astringer.

This man may help me to his majesty's ear,
 If he would spend his power. God save you, sir. 8

Gent. And you.Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the court of France.Gent. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, sir, that you are not fallen 12
 From the report that goes upon your goodness;
 And therefore, goaded with most sharp occasions,
 Which lay nice manners by, I put you to
 The use of your own virtues, for the which 16
 I shall continue thankful.

Gent. What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you
 To give this poor petition to the king,
 And aid me with that store of power you have 20

Gent. The king's not here.

Hel. Not here, sir!

Gent. Not, indeed:

He hence remov'd last night, and with more haste
Than is his use.

Wid. Lord, how we lose our pains! 24

Hel. All's well that ends well yet,
Though time seem so adverse and means unfit.

I do beseech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Marry, as I take it, to Rousillon, 28
Whither I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you, sir,
Since you are like to see the king before me,
Commend the paper to his gracious hand;
Which I presume shall render you no blame 32
But rather make you thank your pains for it.
I will come after you with what good speed
Our means will make us means.

Gent. This I'll do for you.

Hel. And you shall find yourself to be well thank'd, 36

Whate'er falls more. We must to horse again:

Go, go, provide. [Exeunt.]

Scene Two

[Rousillon. The inner Court of the Countess's Palace]

Enter Clown and Parolles.

Par. Good Monsieur Lavache, give my Lord
Lafeu this letter. I have ere now, sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher clothes; but I am now, sir, muddled in 4 Fortune's mood, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

Clo. Truly, Fortune's displeasure is but slut-tish if it smell so strongly as thou speakest of: I 8 will henceforth eat no fish of Fortune's buttering. Prithee, allow the wind.

Par. Nay, you need not to stop your nose, sir: I spake but by a metaphor. 12

Clo. Indeed, sir, if your metaphor stink, I will stop my nose; or against any man's metaphor. Prithee, get thee further.

Par. Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper. 16

Clo. Foh! prithee, stand away: a paper from Fortune's close-stool to give to a nobleman! Look, here he comes himself.

Enter Lafeu.

Here is a purr of Fortune's, sir, or of Fortune's 20 cat—but not a musk-cat—that has fallen into the unclean fishpond of her displeasure, and, as he says, is muddled withal. Pray you, sir, use the carp as you may, for he looks like a poor, 24 decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity his distress in my similes of comfort, and leave him to your lordship. [Exit.]

Par. My lord, I am a man whom Fortune 28 hath cruelly scratched.

Laf. And what would you have me to do? 'tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knave with Fortune that she 32 should scratch you, who of herself is a good lady, and would not have knaves thrive long under [her]? There's a cardecu for you. Let the justices make you and Fortune friends; I am for other 36 business.

Par. I beseech your honour to hear me one single word.

Laf. You beg a single penny more: come, 40 you shall ha't; save your word.

Par. My name, my good lord, is Parolles.

Laf. You beg more than [one] word then. Cox my passion! give me your hand. How 44 does your drum?

Par. O, my good lord! you were the first that found me.

Laf. Was I, in sooth? and I was the first 48 that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my lord, to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out.

Laf. Out upon thee, knave! dost thou put 52 upon me at once both the office of God and the devil? one brings thee in grace and the other brings thee out. [Trumpets sound.] The king's coming; I know by his trumpets. Sirrah, in- 56 quire further after me; I had talk of you last night: though you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat: go to, follow.

Par. I praise God for you. [Exeunt.] 60

Scene Three

[The Same. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Flourish. Enter King, old Lady [the Countess], Lafeu, the two French Lords, with Attendants.

King. We lost a jewel of her, and our esteem
Was made much poorer by it: but your son,
As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to know
Her estimation home.

Count. 'Tis past, my liege; 4
And I beseech your majesty to make it
Natural rebellion, done i' the blaze of youth,
When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force,
O'erbears it and burns on.

King. My honour'd lady, 8
I have forgiven and forgotten all,
Though my revenges were high bent upon him,
And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. This I must say—
But first I beg my pardon—the young lord 12
Did to his majesty, his mother, and his lady,
Offence of mighty note, but to himself
The greatest wrong of all: he lost a wife
Whose beauty did astonish the survey 16
Of richest eyes, whose words all ears took captive,
Whose dear perfection hearts that scorn'd to serve
Humbly call'd mistress.

King. Praising what is lost
Makes the remembrance dear. Well, call him hither; 20
We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill
All repetition. Let him not ask our pardon:

1 our esteem: the value of our kingdom

4 estimation: worth home: thoroughly

10 high bent upon: strongly directed against

17 richest: most experienced

3 As: as if

5 make: consider

22 repetition: reference to what is past

The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper than oblivion we do bury 24
Th' incensing relics of it. Let him approach,
A stranger, no offender; and inform him
So 'tis our will he should.

Gent. I shall, my liege.

[Exit.]

King. What says he to your daughter? have you spoke? 28

Laf. All that he is hath reference to your highness.

King. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me,

That sets him high in fame.

Enter Count Bertram.

Laf. He looks well on 't.

King. I am not a day of season, 32
For thou mayst see a sunshine and a hail
In me at once; but to the brightest beams
Distracted clouds give way: so stand thou forth;
The time is fair again.

Ber. My high-repented blames, 36
Dear sovereign, pardon to me.

King. All is whole;
Not one word more of the consumed time.
Let's take the instant by the forward top,
For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees 40
Th' inaudible and noiseless foot of time
Steals ere we can effect them. You remember
The daughter of this lord?

Ber. Admiringly, my liege: 44

29 hath reference to: is dependent upon

31 He . . . on 't: his appearance bears it out

32 of season: seasonable

36 high-repented blames: deeply repented faults

38 consumed: past

39 instant: present moment

forward top: forelock

At first I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart
 Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue,
 Where the impression of mine eye enfixing,
 Contempt his scornful perspective did lend me, 48
 Which warp'd the line of every other favour;
 Scorn'd a fair colour, or express'd it stolen;
 Extended or contracted all proportions
 To a most hideous object. Thence it came 52
 That she, whom all men prais'd, and whom myself,
 Since I have lost, have lov'd, was in mine eye
 The dust that did offend it.

King.

Well excus'd:

That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away 56
 From the great compt. But love that comes too late,
 Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried,
 To the great sender turns a sour offence,
 Crying, 'That's good that's gone.' Our rash faults 60
 Make trivial price of serious things we have,
 Not knowing them until we know their grave:
 Oft our displeasures, to ourselves unjust,
 Destroy our friends and after weep their dust: 64
 Our own love waking cries to see what's done,
 While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon.
 Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forget her.
 Send forth your amorous token for fair Maudlin: 68
 The main consents are had; and here we'll stay
 To see our widower's second marriage-day,
 Which better than the first, O dear heaven, bless!
 Or, ere they meet, in me, O nature, cesse! 72

Laf. Come on, my son, in whom my house's name
 Must be digested, give a favour from you
 To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,

48 perspective: instrument for producing optical illusions

50 express'd: declared

66 Cf. n.

72 cesse: cease

That she may quickly come.

[Bertram gives a ring.]

By my old beard, 76

And every hair that's on 't, Helen, that's dead,
Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this,
The last that e'er I took her leave at court,
I saw upon her finger.

Ber. Hers it was not. 80

King. Now, pray you, let me see it; for mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd to 't.—
This ring was mine; and, when I gave it Helen,
I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood 84
Necessitied to help, that by this token
I would relieve her. Had you that craft to reave her
Of what should stead her most?

Ber. My gracious sovereign,
Howe'er it pleases you to take it so, 88
The ring was never hers.

Count. Son, on my life,
I have seen her wear it; and she reckon'd it
At her life's rate.

Laf. I am sure I saw her wear it.

Ber. You are deceiv'd, my lord, she never saw it: 92
In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wrapp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it. Noble she was, and thought
I stood ingag'd: but when I had subscrib'd 96
To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully
I could not answer in that course of honour
As she had made the overture, she ceas'd
In heavy satisfaction, and would never 100

79 The last: the last time

96 ingag'd: unengaged

96, 97 subscrib'd . . . fortune: admitted the state of my fortunes

98, 99 I . . . overture: I could not pursue the honorable course she suggested

85 Necessitied to help: in need of help

100 heavy satisfaction: sorrowful acquiescence

Receive the ring again.

King. Plutus himself,
That knows the tinct and multiplying medicine,
Hath not in nature's mystery more science
Than I have in this ring: 'twas mine, 'twas Helen's, 104
Whoever gave it you. Then, if you know
That you are well acquainted with yourself,
Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her. She call'd the saints to surety, 108
That she would never put it from her finger,
Unless she gave it to yourself in bed,
Where you have never come, or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.

Ber. She never saw it. 112

King. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine honour,
And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me
Which I would fain shut out. If it should prove That thou art so inhuman—'twill not prove so— 116
And yet I know not: thou didst hate her deadly,
And she is dead; which nothing, but to close
Her eyes myself, could win me to believe,
More than to see this ring. Take him away. 120

[Guards seize Bertram.]

My fore-past proofs, howe'er the matter fall,
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly fear'd too little. Away with him!
We'll sift this matter further.

Ber. If you shall prove 124
This ring was ever hers, you shall as easy
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was. [Exit guarded.]

King. I am wrapp'd in dismal thinkings.

Enter a Gentleman [the Astringer].

Gent.

Gracious sovereign, 128

Whether I have been to blame or no, I know not:

Here's a petition from a Florentine,

Who hath for four or five removes come short

To tender it herself. I undertook it, 132

Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech

Of the poor suppliant, who by this I know

Is here attending: her business looks in her

With an importing visage, and she told me, 136

In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern

Your highness with herself.

[King reads] a Letter. 'Upon his many protestations to marry me when his wife was dead, I 140 blush to say it, he won me. Now is the Count Roussillon a widower: his vows are forfeited to me, and my honour's paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to 144 his country for justice. Grant it me, O king! in you it best lies; otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor maid is undone.

Diana Capilet.' 148

Laf. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and toll for this: I'll none of him.

King. The heavens have thought well on thee, Lafeu, To bring forth this discovery. Seek these suitors. 152 Go speedily and bring again the count.

[Exeunt some Attendants.]

131 removes: days' journeys

145, 146 in . . . lies: it is most in your power

150 toll for: take out a license to sell

Enter Bertram [guarded].

I am afeard the life of Helen, lady,
Was foully snatch'd.

Count.

Now, justice on the doers!

King. I wonder, sir, sith wives are monsters to
you, 156

And that you fly them as you swear them lordship,
Yet you desire to marry.

Enter Widow, Diana, and Parolles [with Attendants].

What woman's that?

Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine,
Derived from the ancient Capilet: 160
My suit, as I do understand, you know,
And therefore know how far I may be pitied.

Wid. I am her mother, sir, whose age and honour
Both suffer under this complaint we bring, 164
And both shall cease, without your remedy.

King. Come hither, count; do you know these women?

Ber. My lord, I neither can nor will deny
But that I know them: do they charge me further? 168

Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?

Ber. She's none of mine, my lord.

Dia. If you shall marry,
You give away this hand, and that is mine;
You give away heaven's vows, and those are mine; 172
You give away myself, which is known mine;
For I by vow am so embodied yours
That she which marries you must marry me:
Either both or none. 176

Laf. [To Bertram.] Your reputation comes too short for my daughter: you are no husband for her.

Ber. My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature, 180

Whom sometime I have laugh'd with: let your highness
Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour
Than for to think that I would sink it here.

King. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend, 184

Till your deeds gain them: fairer prove your honour,
Than in my thought it lies.

Dia. Good my lord,
Ask him upon his oath, if he does think
He had not my virginity. 188

King. What sayst thou to her?

Ber. She's impudent, my lord;
And was a common gamester to the camp.

Dia. He does me wrong, my lord; if I were so,
He might have bought me at a common price: 192
Do not believe him. O! behold this ring,
Whose high respect and rich validity
Did lack a parallel; yet for all that
He gave it to a commoner o' the camp, 196
If I be one.

Count. He blushes, and 'tis hit:
Of six preceding ancestors, that gem
Conferr'd by testament to the sequent issue,
Hath it been ow'd and worn. This is his wife: 200
That ring's a thousand proofs.

King. Methought you said
You saw one here in court could witness it.

Dia. I did, my lord, but loath am to produce

184 you . . . friend: they are unfriendly to you

190 gamester: harlot

194 respect: esteem

validity: value

197 'tis hit: it is discovered

So bad an instrument: his name's Parolles. 204

[Exit Parolles covertly.]

Laf. I saw the man to-day, if man he be.

King. Find him, and bring him hither.

[Exit an Attendant.]

Ber.

What of him?

He's quoted for a most perfidious slave,
With all the spots of the world tax'd and debosh'd, 208
Whose nature sickens but to speak a truth.
Am I or that or this for what he'll utter,
That will speak anything?

King. She hath that ring of yours.

Ber. I think she has: certain it is I lik'd her, 212
And boarded her i' the wanton way of youth.
She knew her distance and did angle for me,
Madding my eagerness with her restraint,
As all impediments in fancy's course 216
Are motives of more fancy; and, in fine,
Her infinite cunning, with her modern grace,
Subdued me to her rate: she got the ring,
And I had that which any inferior might 220
At market-price have bought.

Dia. I must be patient;
You, that have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
May justly diet me. I pray you yet—
Since you lack virtue I will lose a husband— 224
Send for your ring; I will return it home,
And give me mine again.

Ber. I have it not.

King. What ring was yours, I pray you?

Dia. Sir, much like

Dia. And this was it I gave him, being a-bed.

King. The story then goes false you threw it him
Out of a casement.

Dia. I have spoke the truth. 232

[Re-]enter Parolles [with Attendant.]

Ber. My lord, I do confess the ring was hers.

King. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you.
Is this the man you speak of?

Dia. Ay, my lord.

King. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true, I charge
you, 236

Not fearing the displeasure of your master—
Which on your just proceeding I'll keep off—
By him and by this woman here what know you?

Par. So please your majesty, my master hath 240 been an honourable gentleman. Tricks he hath had in him, which gentlemen have.

King. Come, come, to the purpose: did he love this woman? 244

Par. Faith, sir, he did love her; but how?

King. How, I pray you?

Par. He did love her, sir, as a gentleman loves a woman. 248

King. How is that?

Par. He loved her, sir, and loved her not.

King. As thou art a knave, and no knave,— what an equivocal companion is this! 252

Par. I am a poor man, and at your majesty's command.

Dia. Do you know he promised me marriage?

Par. Faith, I know more than I'll speak.

King. But wilt thou not speak all thou knowest? 260

Par. Yes, so please your majesty. I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her, for, indeed, he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of Furies, 264 and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things which would derive 268 me ill will to speak of: therefore I will not speak what I know.

King. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou canst say they are married: but thou art 272 too fine in thy evidence; therefore stand aside.
This ring, you say, was yours?

Dia. Ay, my good lord.

King. Where did you buy it? or who gave it you? 276

Dia. It was not given me, nor I did not buy it.

King. Who lent it you?

Dia. It was not lent me neither.

King. Where did you find it, then?

Dia. I found it not.

King. If it were yours by none of all these ways, 280
How could you give it him?

Dia. I never gave it him.

Laf. This woman's an easy glove, my lord:
she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. This ring was mine: I gave it his first wife. 284

Dia. It might be yours or hers, for aught I know.

King. Take her away; I do not like her now.

To prison with her; and away with him.

Unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this ring 288

Thou diest within this hour.

Dia. I'll never tell you.

King. Take her away.

Dia. I'll put in bail, my liege.

King. I think thee now some common customer.

Dia. By Jove, if ever I knew man, 'twas you. 292

King. Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while?

Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty.

He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to 't;

I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not. 296

Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life;

I am either maid, or else this old man's wife.

[Pointing to Lafeu.]

King. She does abuse our ears: to prison with her!

Dia. Good mother, fetch my bail. [Exit Widow.]

Stay, royal sir; 300

The jeweller that owes the ring is sent for,

And he shall surety me. But for this lord,

Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself,

Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit him: 304

He knows himself my bed he hath defil'd,

And at that time he got his wife with child:

Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick:

So there's my riddle: one that's dead is quick; 308

And now behold the meaning.

Enter Helen and Widow.

King. Is there no exorcist

Ber.

Both, both. O pardon!

Hel. O my good lord! when I was like this maid,
I found you wondrous kind. There is your ring;

And, look you, here's your letter; this it says: 316

'When from my finger you can get this ring,
And are by me with child, &c.' This is done:

Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

Ber. If she, my liege, can make me know this clearly, 320

I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove untrue,
Deadly divorce step between me and you!

O! my dear mother, do I see you living? 324

Laf. Mine eyes smell onions; I shall weep anon. [To Parolles.] Good Tom Drum, lend me a handkercher: so, I thank thee. Wait on me home, I'll make sport with thee: let thy 328
curtsies alone, they are scurvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point this story know,
To make the even truth in pleasure flow.

[To Diana.] If thou be'st yet a fresh uncropped flower, 332

Choose thou thy husband, and I'll pay thy dower;

For I can guess that by thy honest aid

Thou kept'st a wife herself, thyself a maid.

NOTES

I. i. 63, 64. I do affect a sorrow indeed, but I have it too. Helena means that she affects a grief for her father, but feels a real grief at the departure of Bertram. Her other cryptic utterances in this scene hint at her love for Bertram, which she conceals behind a veil of obscure and ambiguous speech.

I. i. 67, 68. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal. 'If Bertram returned your love, your joy would overbalance your grief.'

I. i. 70. How understand we that? Lafeu's question refers to the Countess' remark: he has just perceived that it contained some hidden meaning. Perhaps, as Coieridge suggests, Lafeu and Bertram speak at once.

I. i. 82, 83. He cannot want the best That shall attend his love. The sense is obscure. Perhaps it is that Bertram can never lack the best service of those who, like Lafeu, follow him because they love him.

I. i. 85, 86. The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts be servants to you! 'May your dearest wishes be fulfilled.'

I. i. 92, 93. And these great tears grace his remembrance more Than those I shed for him. The tears she now sheds for Bertram are, to those who mistake their cause, a greater tribute to her father than those she shed at his death.

I. i. 100, 101. In his bright radiance and collateral light Must I be comforted, not in his sphere. An allusion to the Ptolemaic system of astronomy, according to which there were eight concentric spheres surrounding the earth. Each star or planet was limited to one of these spheres, but its light penetrated the others.

I. i. 116. Looks. The third person plural present indicative of Shakespearean verbs not infrequently end in s: cf. II. iii. 127, III. iv. 15, III. v. 25.

I. i. 120, 121. No. And no. Parolles disclaims any right to the title of monarch, and Helena in turn repudiates the name of queen.

I. i. 154, 155. should be buried in highways, out of all sanctified limit. It was forbidden to bury suicides in consecrated ground: they were frequently interred at a crossroads.

I. i. 158. his. The regular possessive case of 'it' in Shakespeare. 'Its' occurs but seldom.

I. i. 182-191. Helena catalogues the endearing nicknames by which Bertram will address his (supposititious) sweethearts at the French court. Under the stress of dissembling her emotion she speaks somewhat incoherently.

I. i. 214, 215. predominant, retrograde. Astrological terms. A planet is generally benign in its influence when it is predominant, and malignant when it is retrograde.

I. i. 222. a virtue of a good wing. A reference to the popular sport of falconry. The insinuation is that Parolles is apt in flight, which would be a virtue in a hawk, but which is a reproach to a soldier.

I. i. 231-233. When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast none, remember thy friends. Parolles is already affecting the cynical philosophy which he believes suitable to a courtier. The advice may be paraphrased, 'Say your prayers when you can find nothing better to do, and remember your friends only when you are too busy to serve them.'

I. i. 241, 242. The mightiest space in fortune nature brings To join like likes, and kiss like native things. 'Across the gulf of the greatest disparity in fortune, nature brings kindred spirits to join each other, and to kiss like people born to each other's society.'

I. ii. 1. Lord. The 1. Lord and 2. Lord of this scene are, in the Folio, called '1 Lo. G.' and '2 Lo. E.' The initials, as Capell suggested, are probably those of the actors who played these parts. These initials are used in all the other scenes (II. i, III. i, ii, vi, IV. i, iii) in which the two French lords appear, although the title preceding the initial is sometimes 'Lord,' sometimes 'French' and sometimes 'Cap[tain].' At the beginning of IV. i the 1. Lord is described by the Folio as '1 Lord E.,' and the error in the initial persists throughout the scene. It is clear from the dialogue in III. vi and IV. iii that it is '1 Lord G.' who undertakes and carries out the capture of Parolles.

I. ii. 33-35. but they may jest Till their own scorn return to them unnoted Ere they can hide their levity in honour. 'Your father had the same airy flights of satirical wit with the young lords of the present time, but they do not what he did, hide their unnoted levity in honour, cover petty faults with great merit.' (Johnson.)

I. ii. 36-38. So like a courtier, contempt nor bitterness Were in his pride or sharpness; if they were, His equal had awak'd them. 'As was fitting in a courtier, he exhibited neither contempt in his pride, nor bitterness in his sharp strokes of wit, except when he was provoked by an equal.'

I. ii. 44, 45. Making them proud of his humility In their poor praise he humbled. 'Making them proud by his humble acceptance of their praises, which he rendered inadequate by the nobility of his actions.'

I. ii. 50, 51. So in approof lives not his epitaph As in your royal speech. 'His virtues are testified to nowhere so eloquently as in your royal speech.'

I. iii. 57, 58. young Charbon the puritan, and old Poysam the papist. The two names are probably corruptions of 'Chairbonne' and 'Poisson,' referring to the lenten diets of the two sects.

I. iii. 60. joul horns together. The standing Elizabethan jest alluding to the horns that were supposed to grow upon the forehead of a wronged husband.

I. iii. 68. cuckoo. Another stock pleasantry on the same subject, playing on the words 'cuckoo' and 'cuckold.' Cf. Love's Labour's Lost, V. ii. 902-910.

I. iii. 98-101. The puritan clergy thought the surplice savoured too much of Roman Catholicism: they preferred to wear a simple black gown. However, as the laws of the church required the use of the surplice, they wore it, but over the gown.

I. iii. 159, 160. That this distemper'd messenger of wet, The many-colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye. Henley explains this as a reference to 'that suffusion of colours which glimmers around the sight when the eyelashes are wet with tears.'

II. i. 12-14. let higher Italy—Those bated ihat inherit but the fall Of the last monarchy—. A much-disputed passage. The meaning may be, 'Let the Italian nobles, except those whose rank is the gift of the last revolution (and whose opinions on matters of honour are therefore of no account).'

II. i. 33. But one to dance with! Ceremonial swords were a part of court dress.

II. i. 36, 37. our parting is a tortured body. 'Parting us is as painful as dismembering a body.'

II. i. 87, 88. more Than I dare blame my weakness. 'To such a degree that I cannot attribute it entirely to credulity on my part.'

II. i. 114, 115. wherein the honour Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power. 'In the cure of which my father's gift is reputed most powerful.'

II. i. 167. her. This is the reading of the Folio, and there is nothing to show that Shakespeare is not responsible for this mistake in the sex of Hesperus.

II. i. 176. nay worse—if worse—extended. This is the most satisfactory emendation of the obviously corrupt reading of the Folio: 'ne worse of worst extended.'

II. ii. 25. as Tib's rush for Tom's forefinger. Rush rings were frequently exchanged by country lovers who decided to dispense with the marriage ceremony.

II. iii. 34. facinerious. Parolles' error for 'facinorous' (= 'infamous').

II. iii. 50. Mort du vinaigre. Literally, 'By the death of the vinegar,' i.e. 'By the Crucifixion.'

II. iii. 64. to each but one. This may mean either 'but one wife to each of you' or 'to each of you, with one exception (i.e. Bertram).'

II. iii. 84, 85. I had rather be in this choice than throw ames-ace for my life. 'Ames-ace' = two aces, the lowest throw at dice. Lafeu ironically contrasts such ill luck with the good luck of being in this choice.

II. iii. 159. misprision. A play on two meanings of the word: 'wrongful imprisonment' and 'lack of appreciation.'

II. iii. 234. Well, I shall be wiser—. Presumably Parolles intends to conclude with some such words as 'than to attack an old man,' but Lafeu purposely misunderstands him.

II. iii. 246. as I will by thee. Lafeu plays on the word 'past': the meaning is 'I will pass by thee.'

II. iii. 314. these balls bound; there's noise in it. 'The noise which these balls make when they bounce shows that they are good': i.e. 'Your words show that you have proper spirit.'

II. v. 41, 42. like him that leaped into the custard. It was a favorite amusement at city entertainments for a jester to leap into a large custard.

III. i. 12, 13. That the great figure of a council frames By self-unable motion. 'Who forms his ideas of a great council by the sole aid of his own insufficient mental powers.'

III. ii. 92, 93. The fellow has a deal of that too much, Which holds him much to have. 'The fellow has too much of that quality (persuasiveness) which stands him in such good stead.'

III. iv. 4. Saint Jaques' pilgrim. The shrine has not been identified.

III. iv. 13. his despiteful Juno. A reference to the labors of Hercules, imposed upon him by Juno.

III. v. S. d. Violenta. No speech is assigned to Violenta by the Folio. It is possible that she was a speaking character in an earlier version of the play, and that her lines were cancelled in a subsequent revision, while the presence of her name in this stage-direction was overlooked.

III. vi. 40. John Drum's entertainment. Giving a man a beating, or throwing him out of doors, was sometimes called John (or Tom) Drum's entertainment.

III. vi. 65. hic jacet. 'Here lies—': the common beginning of epitaphs. Parolles means that he would get the drum or die in the attempt.

III. vii. 3. But I shall lose the grounds I work upon. 'Unless I give up the only advantage I possess.' The only further proof of her identity which Helena can offer is the evidence of Bertram, and to disclose herself to him would be to defeat her purpose.

IV. i. 46. Bajazet's mule. Probably Parolles' error for 'Balaam's ass.' He wishes to exchange a prattling tongue for one which speaks but seldom, and then only by inspiration.

IV. ii. 25. Jove's. Quite possibly Shakespeare wrote 'God's,' which was altered to the present word in deference to the laws against blasphemy on the stage. The general meaning of the passage would then be, 'Who would believe me, if I swore by God that I would break His laws?'

IV. ii. 30. unseal'd. A bond without a seal is invalid.

IV. ii. 38. I see that men make rope's in such a scarre. This line is hopelessly corrupt.

IV. iii. 31, 32. Is it not meant damnable in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? 'Do we not court damnation in parading our unlawful intentions?' Most editors emend 'most' for 'meant.'

IV. iii. 255. Half won is match well made; match, and well make it. 'A bargain in which you receive half your price in advance is a good one; adopt this course.'

IV. iii. 283. Nessus. The centaur who attempted to carry off Deïaneira.

IV. iii. 314-317. The legal phrases in this speech are all taken from the form for the absolute conveyance of real property.

IV. iv. 9. Marseilles. This should be pronounced as a tri-syllabic word. The spellings of the Folio are Marcellae and Marcellus.

IV. iv. 28, 29. Let death and honesty Go with your impositions. 'Even unto death, if your commands are honest.'

IV. v. 65. jade's tricks. Used punningly: a jade is a horse, a jade's trick is a sharp practice.

IV. v. 104. two pile and a half. The quality of velvet is determined by the height of the pile or nap, under the terms 'double-pile,' 'triple-pile,' etc.

V. ii. 35, 36. Let the justices make you and Fortune friends. 'Let the justices of the peace award you a maintenance out of the funds for the poor.'

V. iii. 66. While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon. 'While shameful hate, having done its worst, is indifferent to the distress it has caused.'

V. iii. 121-123. My fore-past proofs, howe'er the matter fall, Shall tax my fears of little vanity, Having vainly fear'd too little. 'No matter what my conclusions may be, I shall not be ashamed of having feared too much, since it is clear from what I have heard that until now I have been too unsuspecting.'

APPENDIX A

SOURCES OF THE PLAY

The source of the main plot of All's Well that Ends Well is the ninth novel of the third day of Boccaccio's Decameron, as translated by William Painter in The Palace of Pleasure (1566). Painter's synopsis of the story is as follows:

'Giletta a phisician's doughter of Narbon, healed the Frenche Kyng of a fistula, for reward whereof she demaunded Beltramo Counte of Rossiglione to husbände. The Counte beyng marriede againste his will, for despite fled to Florence and loved an other. Giletta his wife, by pollicie founde meanes to lye with her husbände, in place of his lover, and was begotten with child of two soonnes: which knowen to her husbände, he received her againe, and afterwarde he lived in greate honor and felicitie.'

The most significant features of Boccaccio's story which Shakespeare altered are these: Giletta is rich; she is not the foster-sister of Bertram, though brought up with him; and the King of France is not present to act as deus ex machina in the final reconciliation. Boccaccio's tale is related chiefly for the sake of the plot, and so far as the character-portraits of Helena, Bertram and the King are concerned Shakespeare's debt to his original is negligible. There are no counterparts in the novel for the Countess, Lafeu, Lavache or any of the persons of the sub-plot which recounts the adventures and downfall of Parolles. For this sub-plot and for the character of Parolles no sources have been found, although various books have been suggested from which Shakespeare might have drawn a few minor incidents or expressions.

APPENDIX B

THE HISTORY OF THE PLAY

The early history of All's Well that Ends Well has long been the subject of controversy. In 1598 Francis Meres, in his Palladis Tamia, referred to Shakespeare as the author of a play called Love's Labour's Won. It has been almost universally assumed that this play has not been lost, but that it was re-named before publication. Five or six of Shakespeare's comedies have been identified with Love's Labour's Won by various editors, but the theory of Dr. Farmer, put forth in 1767, that the play is the one known to us as All's Well that Ends Well, has been concurred in by the majority of critics. The internal evidence, on which alone this theory rests, is fairly convincing. The older title certainly fits the plot of the play admirably. Moreover, two speeches in the fifth act seem to refer directly to that title, and in the second of these speeches there is also an unmistakable allusion to the present name of the play:

Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

V. iii. 319

All is well ended if this suit be won. . . .

V. iii. 341

If Dr. Farmer's conjecture is correct, All's Well must have been written by 1598, but many critics place its composition much earlier than this, and a few place it as late as 1606. The evidence (which is again entirely internal) is extremely confusing. The frequent rhymed passages and the letters in verse are characteristic of Shakespeare's earlier work: on the other hand, there are many speeches (e.g. that of the King, I. ii. 24-48) in the involved elliptical style of the author's later period. Perhaps the most satisfactory, and certainly the most commonly received, solution of the problem is to assume that All's Well as we have it is the revised form of an early play. This view is strengthened by the existence of some awkward breaks in the text (notably that at I. i. 181) which may be due to the imperfect joining of the older and the newer versions.

All's Well that Ends Well was first printed in the Folio of 1623, and it did not achieve a separate publication until 1734.¹ There is no record of its having been performed in Shakespeare's lifetime or, indeed, for more than a century after his death. The play was included in a seventeenth century 'Catalogue of part of His Ma^{tes} Servants Playes as they were formerly acted at the Blackfryers & now allowed of to his Ma^{tes} Servants at y^e New Theatre,'² but there is nothing to show that Killigrew ever took advantage of this license. At length, on February 24, 1740-1, the following advertisement appeared in The London Daily Post, and General Advertiser: 'For the Benefit of Mrs. Giffard. At the Late Theatre in Goodman's-Fields, Saturday, March 7, will be performed A Concert . . . N.B. Between the Two Parts of the Concert, will be reviv'd a Play, call'd All's Well That Ends Well. Written by Shakespear, and never performed since his Time. . . . the part of Helena by Mrs. Giffard, with an Epilogue adapted to that Character. . . .'

This performance seems to have been sufficiently successful to incite emulation. The play was put on ten times at Drury Lane during the season of 1741-2 with T. Cibber as Parolles and Mrs. Woffington as Helena. Covent Garden followed suit in 1746, when a performance for Cibber's benefit was arranged for April 1, but as Cibber returned to Drury Lane before that date Woodward took over his part with great success. In the next seventeen years the play was revived several times, chiefly at the instance of Woodward, who was, according to Davies, fond of the rôle of Parolles. Between 1763 and 1900 All's Well was acted only about once a decade. Among those who produced it in the nineteenth century were Samuel Phelps and Charles Fry. Most of the nineteenth century revivals made use of a bowdlerized version of the play arranged by Kemble.

¹ The 'edition' of 1714 noted by Lowndes is merely a copy of the play removed from the eight-volume edition of Rowe.

² This catalogue is reproduced on pp. 316-317 of A History of Restoration Drama by Allardyce Nicoll, who gives its date as c. Jan 12, 1668-9.

The most recent English productions of All's Well were those of the Old Vic in London and of the Memorial Theater in Stratford-on-Avon, both in 1922. The same year saw a German production at the Schauspielhaus in Graz. Dr. E. Mühlbach lists, in the Shakespeare-Jahrbuch for 1921, eight German performances in the years 1911-1920. There seems to be no record of any American performance.

APPENDIX C

THE TEXT OF THE PRESENT EDITION

The text of the present edition is based, by permission of the Oxford University Press, upon that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig, which has been collated with the Folio of 1623. The following deviations have been made from Craig's text:

1. The stage-directions are those of the Folio: additional directions, where necessary, have been printed within square brackets.

2. A number of minor changes in punctuation, not affecting the meaning of the passages involved, have been made without comment. The spelling of a few words has been normalized: e.g. warlike has been substituted for war-like, theoric for theorick, villainy for villany and wagon for waggon.

3. The forms 'y'are' and 'th'art,' where they occur in the Folio, have been restored in place of the 'you're' and 'thou'rt' of Craig's text. The Folio has also been followed in the use of such elisions as 'th' inaudible.'

4. The following changes of text have been made, in almost every instance in accord with the Folio. The readings of the present edition precede the colon: those of Craig follow it:

APPENDIX D

SUGGESTIONS FOR COLLATERAL READING

William Painter: The Palace of Pleasure, Novel XXXVIII. London, 1566. Fourth edition, ed. Joseph Jacobs, London, 1890.

Friedrich Karl Elze: Essays on Shakespeare, translated by L. Dora Schmitz (London, 1874), pp. 118-150.

Edward Dowden: Shakspeare, his Mind and Art. London, 1875. Twelfth edition (London, 1901), pp. 85-93.

George Philip Krapp: Parolles. In Shaksperian Studies, ed. Matthews and Thorndike, pp. 291-300. New York, 1916.

William Witherle Lawrence: The Meaning of 'All's Well that Ends Well.' In Publications of the Modern Language Association of America, Vol. XXXVII, No. 3, pp. 418-469. Menasha, Wis., 1922.

The best critical edition of All's Well that Ends Well is that edited by W. Osborne Brigstocke for the Arden Shakespeare (London, 1904). Valuable commentary will also be found in the edition of W. J. Rolfe (New York, 1881). For a careful study of the text of the play the Cambridge Shakespeare (Cambridge and London, 1863; second edition, 1891) is indispensable.
